DECLARING, 'I AM INNOCENT'

TUCKER SENTENCED TO DIE IN JUNE

Lowell Hotel Burns, Women Caught in Death Trap.

3 KNOWN DEAD, 20 HURT IN FIRE

Firemen Say Three More Bodies Are in Ruins of Richardson House---Boston Woman Among Victims.

Special to the Boston American.

LOWELL, Jan. 27—Three bodies have been recovered and the firemen say there are three more in the ruins of the Richardson Hotel, at the corner of Dutton and Middlesex streets, which was completely destroyed by fire early to-day.

The three dead have been almost positively identified as

Mrs. Plasle, or Christine Nilson, cook at the hotel.
Miss Tessie Kennison, guest, Franklin Falls, N. H.
H. C. Harding, No. 6 Hillside park, Somerville.

There is reason to believe that there are more dead in the ruins, for firemen say that in going through the hotel they saw at least six bodies on the fourth floor, where most of the female employes of the hotel had their rooms. The bodies recovered are charred almost beyond recognition.

The injured number twenty. The most seriously hurt are Arthur S. Anthony, proprietor of the New Bedford Standard, whose body is terribly burned, and who has internal injuries; Edward H. Dickey of Lowell, Andrew Lynch of Lowell and L. Yyaggian of Manchester, N. H., also suffered severe injuries. These, with four other victims, are at St. John's Hospital.

There is intense indignation here to-day as a result of the manner in which the fire department fought the blaze. The slowness of the department, coupled with the fact that none of the trucks had a ladder fifty feet long, with which to reach the fourth story of the hotel, is held to be the direct cause of the deaths of the women penned on the fourth floor of the structure. When the second alarm was sent in, calling the water tower, the horses from an engine had to be sent to the water tower house to drag the tower to the fire.

There were many brave rescues by policemen and citizens who were about at the time the fire started.

PROPERTY LOSS $60,000.

The property loss is estimated at about $60,000. All the guests of the house, of whom there were forty, lost their clothing and personal belongings.

The fire is supposed to have started from defective insulation of electric wires.

A panic occurred in the hotel when the blaze was first discovered, at about 2 o'clock. A party of young men, who had been playing cards in a room on the Middlesex street side of the house, smelled smoke and instantly gave the alarm. One of their number rushed to the street and sent in an alarm from a nearby box, while the others ran through the corridors, rapping at doors and shouting "Fire!"

Men and women rushed from their rooms in their night clothing, only to find the corridors filled with choking smoke. Several rushed to the windows, and hung out until they became unconscious, while the firemen fought to save them.

When the fire apparatus first arrived at the hotel there was little flame, but the house was filled with smoke. It seemed as though the streams of water had no more than begun to play upon the blaze when the entire house was filled with flames, and in an instant was a roaring furnace.

Meantime the firemen had been going through the hotel, a four-story brick structure, trying to save the women, who roomed on the second floor. Several were taken safely to the ground, clad only in their scanty night clothing. It is known that three or four lost their lives.

On the fourth floor a number of the waitresses, cooks and ohter female

(AT ST. JOHN'S HOSPITAL.

ANTHONY, ARTHUR S., publisher of New Bedford Standard. Jumped from fourth story into net. Burned about body, back injured and possible internal injuries.

DICKEY, E. H., Lowell, hands, feet and body terribly burned. Rescued by firemen while hanging unconscious from fourth story window.

YYAGGIAN, L., Manchester, N. H., Greek business man. Numerous burns and cuts.

HENDERSON, JOHN, New York, burns and lacerations of head and hands.

LYNCH, ANDREW, Lowell, feet terribly burned.

Somerville man, name not known, badly cut and burned.

ALLEN, K., Boston, slightly burned and bruised.

Beside these, there are about twelve injured persons who were taken to nearby houses and cared for by physicians. Their names have not yet been learned.

Convicted Slayer of Mabel Page Calmly Heard Words That Doomed Him to Death Chair in Week Beginning June 10—Only Statement Was Declaration of Innocence.

Charles Louis Tucker, convicted murderer of Mabel Page, was to-day sentenced to die in the electric chair during the week beginning Sunday, June 10.

Tucker's only words before he heard his doom pronounced were:

"I AM ABSOLUTELY INNOCENT."

Bravely as he had promised, but controlling himself by a perceptible effort, Tucker heard the words of the gray-haired judge that doomed him to a felon's death. His face was slightly flushed, and he kept his eyes fixed on Judge Sherman's face. After it was over he was led to the office of the sheriff on the floor below, and there he collapsed. It was only for a minute or two, however. He quickly recovered and was taken back to the jail.

It was just 10 o'clock when Tucker was led into the courtroom, handcuffed between Deputies Edgar Fairbairn and Harry Shaw. He was dressed all in black. His face was slightly flushed, but he walked with a firm, unfaltering step to his place in the steel cage, facing the bench.

GREETED BY COUNSEL.

The handcuffs were removed as he entered the cage, and he seated himself in a chair, crossing his legs and folding his hands in his lap.

Almost immediately Attorneys James H. and Thomas F. Vahey and Philip Mansfield entered the court room. They walked over to the cage, shook hands with Tucker and then took their seats.

A few minutes later Clerk Hurd entered, closely followed by Attorney-General Dana Malone and District Attorney Sanderson. A minute later Judge Sherman entered and took his seat.

Court was opened, and then Mr. Sanderson moved for sentence. The only reply made by Mr. Vahey was that counsel for the defence could see no further obstacle, but wished to ask that the date be set as far ahead as possible.

Then Clerk Hurd asked Tucker:

"Have you anything to say why sentence of death should not be pronounced upon you?"

"I AM INNOCENT."

Tucker, who had risen to his feet, replied in a firm voice:

"Your Honor, all I have to say is that I am absolutely innocent of this crime."

Judge Sherman thereupon begun his address, which took about twelve or thirteen minutes, and in which he revived the history of the case. Tucker remained standing while he spoke. When he uttered the words: "I am about to pronounce sentence of death upon you," everyone in the courtroom rose.

The judge then sentenced Tucker to die

MORAN AGAIN TO PUT GURLEY ON THE RACK

DISTRICT ATTORNEY DETERMINED TO GET AT BOTTOM OF PROVIDENT TANGLE.

Determined to get to the bottom of the causes of the failure of the Provident Securities and Banking Company, District Attorney John B. Moran has arranged for a representative of his office to have another conference with Charles D. Gurley to-day. Mr. Gurley was on the rack for four hours yesterday, answering questions of Attorney Henry D. Yeaton, representing Mr. Moran.

Later in the day, through E. C. Willoughby, Mr. Gurley made an appointment to meet Receivers Weed and Hall Monday and submit to them a proposition for settling with the Provident depositors. What this proposition will be Mr. Gurley is not ready to say, but it is [illegible] that it will be an offer to pay part of the claims in cash and give certificates of indebtedness for the remainder.

Mr. Moran also has had Treasurer Lorenzo Burlen of the Provident company on the rack. After he had been refused permission by the police board to question Mr. Burlen at the police hearing a few days ago, Mr. Moran took another tack, and succeeded in arranging for an interview with the treasurer. The conference between Mr. Burlen and the District Attorney's representative lasted several hours, and it is said that Mr. Burlen told in detail all he knew of the operation of the Provident company.

After Mr. Yeaton had finished his examination of Mr. Gurley yesterday and reported to the District-Attorney, Mr. Moran said:

"I have had an interview with Mr. Gurley; not personally, but through Mr. Yeaton. I can only say that whatever evidence of crime, if any, I have secured, will be presented to the grand jury."

In the hope of adding something to the assets of the defunct Provident Banking and Securities Company, Weed and Hall, receivers of the institution, will offer at auction all the desks, counters, tables, furniture and furnishings of every description. The receivers hope to get somewhere near the full value of the furnishings, which, when purchased, were of the most costly description.

SALVINI AWARDED $20,000 IN SUIT

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—Tomaso Salvini, tragedian, was awarded in Brooklyn a verdict for $20,000, costs and interest for two years in his suit against Theodore A. Liebler and George C. Tyler, theatrical agents, for alleged breach of contract.

Salvini averred that the defendants failed to keep a contract made in 1904 by which he was to give a series of thirty performances in various cities here.

NEW TRIAL IN SUIT OVER A DOG FIGHT

Judge Maynard has ordered another trial in the suit of Henry W. Shugg, Jr., against Mrs. Margaret M. Ham of Needham, wife of Wallace A. Ham, to recover $2,000 damages for the loss of his St. Bernard dog Nero, which was killed by her St. Bernard Rover.

CHARLES L. TUCKER FACES JUDGE FOR DEATH SENTENCE

Said That He Would Listen Bravely and Was Determined Not to Weaken When He Heard the Terrible Words—Mother, at His Request, Not in Court.

in the electric chair during the week beginning Sunday, June 10.

Tucker's demanor was the same as during the trial. He was calm, but his effort to keep his nerves under control was plainly visible. After the judge had left the bench he was taken from the cage, handcuffed to the deputies again and taken to the office of Sheriff Fairbairn. There he broke down for a minute, but quickly recovered.

Mrs. Tucker, the prisoner's mother, was not in the courtroom. Her son had asked her to remain away, as he feared that she would be unable to bear up under the actual imposition of the death sentence. Although she wished to be with him or near him every minute, she agreed to his request.

"I feel that I ought to be there in spite of Louis asking me not to," she said. "If he can stand it, I am sure I ought to be able to.

Would Bear Son's Pain.

"I think that my being there would help him. It seems to me that I could take the same pain that he will suffer and in that way he would feel less.

"It makes me feel dreadful to think that only those two officers will be with him when he hears—when it hears it said, whatever they will say. I feel almost as though I was deserting him at a time when he needs me most."

Determined by Law.

After a convict has been sentenced to the punishment of death he shall be confined in the jail in the county in which he was convicted until within ten days of the first day of the week appointed for the execution of the sentence of death. He shall, within such ten days, at a time chosen by the sheriff, be conveyed by him or a deputy designed by him, as secretly as may be to the State Prison, and shall, with the warrant, be delivered to the warden thereof or to the officer performing the duties thereof.

He shall, unless lawfully discharged from such imprisonment, be kept in a cell provided for the purpose from the time of such delivery until the sentence of death is executed upon him, and no person shall be allowed access to him without an order of the court except the officers and employes of the prison, his counsel and such physicians, priest or minister of religion as the warden may approve, and the members of his family who are identified to the satisfaction of the warden of the prison.

If the execution of the sentence of death is respited by the Governor, or is otherwise delayed by process of law, the convict may in the discretion of the warden, be confined in one of the cells in the solitary prison established by chapter one hundred and nine of the resolves of the year eighteen hundred and ninety-four.

COUNCIL MUST KEEP CITY LIGHTING PLEDGES

CENTRAL LABOR UNION COMMITTEE TO DEMAND CHANCE TO VOTE FOR PUBLIC.

A meeting of the Central Labor Union committee on municipal lighting has been called for to-night at Wells Memorial Building to demand that members of the Common Council live up to pledges made before election. Dennis D. Driscoll, chairman of the committee, will strongly recommend that a special meeting of the Central Labor Union be called early next week.

The councilmen will be asked in a forcible manner to give the public a chance to voice itself at the polls on the question of the city owning its own gas and electric plant. Mr. Driscoll, who is secretary-treasurer of the State Branch, American Federation of Labor, and other labor leaders, signify their willingness to take the platform in favor of municipal lighting.

The committee consists of D. D. Driscoll, Alderman Fred J. Kneeland of Painters' Union No. 11, President Martin T. Joyce of the Central Labor Union, John J. McLaughlin of Electrical Workers' Union No. 103, Representative Daniel J. McDonald of the Allied Printing Trades Council, and Secretary Henry Sterling of Typographical Union.

Cigarmakers' Union, which has a membership of 2,000, considered the following resolution at last night's meeting at Paine Memorial Building.

"Whereas, Cigarmarkers' Union No. 97 believes that the people of Boston should be given an opportunity to vote on the question of whether or not the city should engage in the manufacture of gas and electricity, therefore, be it

"Resolved, That the members of this union, in meeting assembled, urgently request that the Common Council, at next Thursday night's meeting, vote to submit the question to the people for them to determine whether or not they will engage in the manufacture of gas and electricity."

In accordance with a law of the union, notice must be given all the members before a resolution is passed. Secretary Abrahams will have the resolution printed on postal cards and sent to each of the 2,000 members. The sentiment at last night's meeting was universally in favor of the question being submitted to the people for a vote.

POLICE SEEK WRECKERS OF MONTREAL LIMITED

TURNED SWITCH AND SET SIGNAL FOR CLEAR TRACK; PASSENGER TRAIN DITCHED.

BURLINGTON, Vt., Jan. 27.—Central Vermont railroad detectives and the local and State authorities are investigating a successful plot to wreck the New England States Limited train at Bolton, twenty-three miles south of here, by turning a switch from the main line and then tying the switch lantern so that the signal read that the track was clear.

The train was running at a rate of sixty miles an hour when it struck and crashed into three freight cars heavily loaded with lumber. That no one was killed or even seriously injured is little short of miraculous. Every one of the six cars of the train was derailed and most of them badly damaged. So sudden was the disaster and so great was the speed of the train that the locomotive and cars bumped along over the ties for a distance of fifty rods.

The locomotive took one track and the cars another, the latter being brought to a stop by the automatic brakes. The engineer, John Donovan, and his fireman, H. C. Bell, stuck to their posts.

The tender was torn from the locomotive and badly crushed, and one of the big drivers was torn from the locomotive. One end of the baggage car was badly smashed and the small car, which had a smoking compartment in the rear, occupied by six men, was almost completely demolished. The car was struck by a large timber, which was driven through the car.

The train was in charge of Conductor Daniel Church. It left Boston at 11:30 o'clock in the morning, over the tracks of the Boston & Maine, and changed at White River Junction to the Central Vermont. It was the newest and best equipped train in the Montreal-Boston service over this line, having been put into commission in June, and was owned jointly by the Boston & Maine and the Central Vermont.

The station agent was at his home for supper, having left everything in order for the train to pass the station as usual. There is no question that the disaster was the result of deliberate work on the part of wreckers, but as yet there is no clue to the miscreants.

DAVID S. BAKER, R. I. POLITICIAN, LAWYER, DEAD

U. S. District Attorney Under Cleveland, Twice Ran for Governor.

Special to the Boston American.

PROVIDENCE, Jan. 27.—The Hon. David S. Baker, one of the most prominent lawyers of Rhode Island and a man who was twice nominated by the Democrats for Governor of the State, died at his home at an early hour to-day. He was surrounded by his wife and four children and retained consciousness to the end. end.

Mr. Baker was fifty-four years old and had been troubled with heart and lung maladies for some time. His fatal illness dated from the latter part of November.

Graduating from Brown University, Mr. Baker read law and was admitted to the bar in 1875. After serving for some time as railroad counsel, he was elected to the State House of Representatives for three terms, after which he served two terms in the State Senate. During a greater proportion of this time he was chairman of the judiciary committee.

After the election of Grover Cleveland as President one of his first official acts was the appointment of Mr. Baker as United States District Attorney, which position Mr. Baker filled during the administration of Mr. Cleveland. Although defeated for the governorship by the Republican candidate, Mr. Baker was nominated the second time at an open meeting and by acclamation. He made a strong run, but was again beaten.

He was much interested in public education and served for six years as school superintendent of Providence. He was senior member of the law firm of Baker, Waterman & McDonnell.

The wife of Mr. Baker is the daughter of the late Hon. John W. Chandler of Brookline.

About three weeks ago an operation was performed on the throat of Mr. Baker by Dr. Shattuck of Boston, and while some considerable relief was afforded, no material benefit was derived.

RED HAT PUT ASIDE BY BISHOP O'CONNELL

Preferred Boston Appointment to Place in Sacred College at Rome.

Love for Boston and his native country led Bishop O'Connell to refuse a higher honor from the Pope, that of membership in the college of cardinals at Rome, which carries with it the red hat.

Pope Pius was desirous of having Bishop O'Connell remain at Rome, where his services would have been of great value. The matter was spoken of by the Pope when Bishop O'Connell returned to Rome at the end of his mission to Japan.

At that time it was plainly intimated to the Bishop that there was a place for him in the sacred college, as a member of the papal diplomatic corps. With his skill as a diplomat and his wonderful gifts as a linguist he would be invaluable to the college.

Bishop O'Connell realized the honor that awaited him, but his desire was to return to America. He told His Holiness that while he stood ready to do anything that his superior might order, the desire of his heart was to return to America. He intimated that the vacancy in the see at Boston would be more to his liking.

Offered the Red Hat.

By many who are acquainted with the customs of the Vatican it was thought that Bishop O'Connell would become a member of the sacred college. It is the custom to reward envoys of the Pope to the great powers with elevation to the college, and Bishop O'Connell's work with Japan, it was felt, was certain to give him a place in the college.

This would have left the way clear for Bishop Harkins of Providence, Bishop Brady or Vicar-General Byrne, the three men suggested two years ago for the vacancy in the Boston see.

Bishop O'Connell's ability to converse with the Mikado of Japan in the tongue of that country was one of the accomplishments that brought him the offer of the red hat. In other languages the bishop is efficient, but it is said that he is the only churchman of high rank who can converse in Japanese.

When Bishop O'Connell will return to Boston has not yet been decided. At present he is at the American College in Rome, awaiting orders. Already steps are being taken in this city and in Portland to accord him a grand reception when he arrives here. The consecration exercises in the Cathedral of the Holy Cross of this city, which will not take place for some weeks, will be the most impressive ceremony in Catholic circles of this city since the venerable Archbishop Williams was consecrated nearly a generation ago.

May Vacate Portland See.

Definite information is at yet unobtainable as to the plans to be followed by the local church authorities, and Bishop O'Connell, in the manner of co-operating in the work of the local diocese. It is not certain whether the coadjutor will remain in his own diocese at Portland for the present, or be asked to come to Boston. Should he come to Boston, it would be likely that he would declare his own see in Portland vacated. In this event another prelate would have to be appointed for Maine.

Archbishop Williams will be permitted to continue his duties without calling on Bishop O'Connell for assistance, in which case the coadjutor would not exercise any jurisdiction until the demise or retirement of Archbishop Williams.

GIRL'S MIND BLANK SINCE CHRISTMAS

LOSES MEMORY OF MONTH

FALL RIVER, Jan. 27.—The nineteen-year-old girl whose identity has been shrouded in mystery since last Sunday, when she was taken to the City Hospital with hands and feet frostbitten and in a comatose condition, was restored to reason and has told a strange tale.

She says she is Elizabeth Mafesky of No. 68 Butler street, Philadelphia.

Cries "I'm Dying."

Sunday the smartly dressed young woman staggered into a tenement house in Flint Village, and, crying out "I'm dying," collapsed on the floor. Mrs. Malvina Morin raised the girl to a couch, and in a few minutes she came to. The explanation of her frostbitten hands was that she had slept out in the woods between New Bedford and this city for nearly a week. She gave her name as "Mary Fisher, New Bedford."

Rather unexpectedly her reason was restored to her, and when told of what she had said about herself and her condition she laughed heartily.

She says she has a very distinct recollection of leaving home December 23, to purchase some Christmas presents. To the best of her recollection she had $35 with her then.

Mind a Blank.

The last she remembers is that she stood looking in the window of a big department store. Her mind is a blank from that moment until she reached Mrs. Morin's house Sunday last.

The police, after hearing the story, went to the house. The woman said she found a pocketbook with six cents in it on the couch after Elizabeth had been removed to the hospital. The police pulled the couch from the wall and found a roll of bills amounting to $25. Mrs. Morin said it surely wasn't her property, and so the police gave it to the patient. The physicians say that after another week of rest she will be able to go home.

LONE WOMAN FOUND DEAD

MILTON, Vt., Jan. 27.—Mrs. Diana Berkeley, a milliner, was found dead in her home, where she lived alone, from asphyxiation by coal gas, which had escaped from a stove.

A DIFFERENCE IN LUNGS.

In the Edinburgh University three human lungs lie side by side. One is of an Eskimo and is snow white. In life, this would be ruddy with rich blood. Another is that of a coal-miner and is black. The other is of a town dweller and is a dirty slate gray, as are the lungs of most city residents. That's why consumption thrives in cities.

One reason why Scott's Emulsion does so much to keep down consumption is because it helps to keep the lungs clean and supplies them with rich, red blood. It makes the lungs germ-resisting. If the body is run down and health is at a low ebb Scott's Emulsion will build it up quickly and permanently.

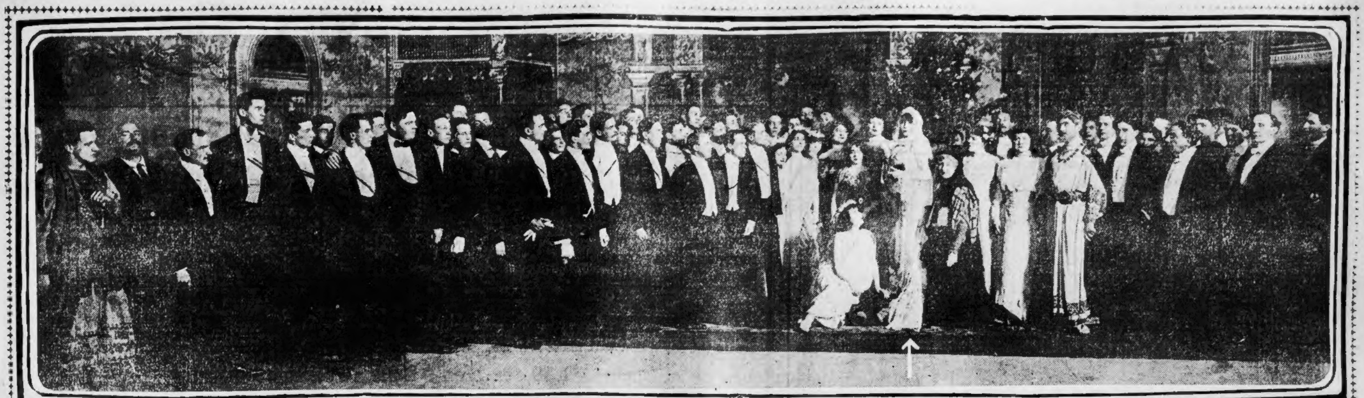
CERCLE FRANCAIS GIVES BERNHARDT MEDAL AND MAKES HER MEMBER



Flashlight Photograph by Hall, New York.

MME. BERNHARDT RECEIVING GOLD MEDAL FROM CERCLE FRANCAIS, HARVARD, ON BOSTON THEATRE STAGE

Arrow points to Mme. Bernhardt in photograph.

Harvard Society Honors Eminent French Actress After Performance on Stage of the Boston Theatre and She Greets Students with Enthusiasm.

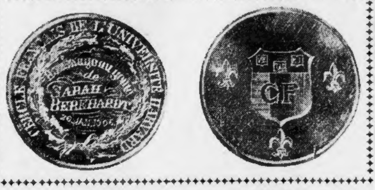
Sarah Bernhardt is now a gold medalist, and the only woman member of the Cercle Francais of Harvard University.

She was formally initiated into that illustrious body on the stage of the Boston Theatre after the performance of "Phedre" last evening. All the members of the Cercle Francais and of her company were present and there was a great deal of enthusiasm.

Seventy members of the Cercle had witnessed the performance from the orchestra. The big theatre had been decorated with the tri-color of France and the insignia of the Cercle was displayed from the boxes. The theatre held the largest audience of the week, every inch of standing room being occupied, and several hundreds were unable to get a glimpse of the stage. There was no unusual event during the performance, except the presentation over the footlights of an immense wreath to Madame Bernhardt from the Cercle.

Homage to Genius.

Immediately after the close of the performance, the Cercle members were escorted to the stage and were received by Madame Bernhardt and the members of her company in costume. The tragedienne stood upon the throne chair used in the production of "Phedre" and shook each of the Circle members by the hand.



MEDAL PRESENTED SARAH BERNHARDT.

Then President E. C. Edson of the Cercle addressed her as follows:

"Madame: When we proposed electing you to be an honorary member of the Cercle Francais de Harvard, it was to the genius of Sarah Bernhardt alone that we intended to express our respectful homage. This homage you will find engraved in enduring characters on the medal which I have the honor of presenting to you in the name of all these, my comrades. It is the tribute of admiration which we offer to the great artist who has given life to Adrienne Lecouvreur, to Margaret Gauthier, to Phedre and to so many other poetic creations which have each in turn filled us with delight, or moved us to anguish.

"But what is not engraved on this medal, madame, is the homage which we wish to convey to the gracious woman who has consented to receive us during the past fortnight upon a footing at once so cordial and so friendly, who has charmed us by the rare delicacy of her intuitions, who has partaken with such amiableness and simplicity of our bread and salt.

"All this has constituted us friends, madame. You yourself have sealed friendship's pact by promising to return to us before your departure for France. Therefore, instead of taking a melancholy leave of you, we all unite in gaily wishing you au revoir."

President Edson spoke in French, and Madame Bernhardt replied likewise, saying:

Was Deeply Touched.

"I am deeply touched by your many tokens of friendship. I love to call it by that name. It will give me the greatest pleasure all through my life to remember my Boston visit and you gentlemen of Harvard. I shall redeem my promise to return to you and will take the greatest pleasure in doing so, for I feel sure that it is the last time that I shall ever come here to America. I shall look forward to my return to see your play. Thank you all from my heart."

Madame Bernhardt then walked about the stage, shaking hands with all the members and saying "Merci, merci" to each. She was given three very enthusiastic Harvard cheers and then the group was photographed by flashlight.

WOMEN TRAPPED IN LOWELL HOTEL FIRE HORROR

employes of the hotel had their rooms. At 3 o'clock a fireman reported that six bodies had been seen on that floor. He said that they lay in such a manner that it is probable they were leaving their rooms at the time, and were overcome by smoke. It was impossible to remove the bodies at the time.

The hotel is situated at the corner of Dutton and Middlesex streets, directly opposite the Boston & Maine railroad station. Although the hotel structure was an old building, it had been remodeled but a short time ago, and was practically a new hotel. The building is gutted and will be a complete loss. The money loss has not yet been estimated, but it is believed will reach at least $75,000.

There were sixty sleeping rooms in the hotel and about forty guests in the house last night. Mr. Cushing, the lessee, says he thinks that the dead are all on the upper floor. The structure was certified to have all the safety appliances required by law. It was a building fronting seventy-five feet on Dutton street and sixty on Middlesex.

THRILLING RESCUES, NARROW ESCAPES

SPECIAL TO THE BOSTON AMERICAN.

LOWELL, Jan. 27.—There were thrilling rescues at the fire in the Richardson House. Edward H. Dickey found himself hemmed in on all sides by smoke and flame, when he was awakened in his room on the fourth floor.

He leaned out of the window, choking with smoke, while the flames rushed toward him. They licked his feet, scorching him, and the smoke overcame him. Firemen below fought to save him. They twice raised ladders and found them too short. The last attempt to reach him was successful, and he was carried down, almost dead.

One of the three ambulances summoned carried him to St. John's Hospital, where he was promptly cared for by Dr. F. A. O'Sullivan. It is reported there that while his condition is extremely serious, there is hope of recovery.

Arthur S. Anthony, a New Bedford newspaper man, jumped four stories to a net spread by the firemen. Twice he started to jump and the police and firemen yelled to him to wait. The smoke and flame were creeping up behind him. At last, unable to stand it any longer, he jumped to the net. He was rushed to St. John's Hospital, where it was found that he has internal injuries, and that his back is badly injured.

A Greek merchant, whose name looks like "Gordan" as it appears on the register of the hotel, had a narrow escape from death. He was in one of the upper stories of the hotel when the fire was discovered. He would have jumped to the ground after he found his exit from the hallways cut off but for firemen, who raised a ladder and carried him to safety.

Edward Cushing, proprietor of the hotel, had rooms with his wife and child on the second floor. Mrs. Cushing got out safely with the child in her arms, groping her way through the dense smoke that filled the hallway. She went to the St. Charles Hotel, where a number of other guests were taken.

Fred Kilgore of Worcester slept in a room on the second floor. He was aroused, he said, by other guests pounding on the doors and shouting fire. He had little difficulty in getting out of the building.

WOMAN CRIED FOR AID, BUT DIED IN FIRE

Special to the Boston American.

LOWELL, Jan. 27.—The death of Mrs. Pisale of Boston, pastry cook of the hotel, was one of the most pathetic of the fire. She roomed on the top floor and her frantic appeals for help could be heard distinctly through the roaring of the flames and the shouts of the people.

Mrs. Pisale weighed about 250 pounds, and when her charred body was finally taken out it was found that she had made an effort to dress.

Attracted by her cries for help, the firemen raised a ladder to where they thought the sounds came from.

They failed to locate her room, and the ladder was raised to the next window. Before it could be changed the woman had been burned almost to a crisp. Her body was not taken out until after the fire had been practically extinguished.

LIFE ROPE BROKE, MAN FELL TO GROUND

Special to the Boston American.

LOWELL, Jan. 27.—Ira Allen, a Lowell man and an occupant of one of the rooms on the top floor, was soon cut off from escape. The life rope was thrown to him, and by this means he started the dangerous descent. On reaching the second floor the rope broke and Allen fell to the ground. He was badly hurt.

His fall was noticed by firemen, who rescued him from the flames which were burning all around him. He was also painfully burned.

The cause of the fire, according to firemen and police, was defective insulation of the electric light wires on the top floor of the building. The flames spread from top to bottom with startling rapidity. The loss is partially covered by insurance.

The Richardson Hotel was erected in 1879 by the Richardson brothers, one of whom, A. G. Richardson, was mayor of Lowell for some time.

SAW WOMAN FALL BACK INTO RAGING FLAMES

Special to the Boston American.

LOWELL, Jan. 27.—Heroic efforts were made to save the guests of the hotel.

William Murphy, a hackman, who has a stand at the railroad station, just across the street from the Richardson House, says that he saw smoke and flame issuing from a window on the Middlesex street side of the house.

"I heard a woman shriek," said Murphy. "It was horrible! Then the flames on the fourth floor lit up one of the rooms and I saw a white-robed figure fall back into the fire. It must have been a woman.

"I rushed to the night lunch cart of John McKenna. We went into the house and rushed through the corridors, shouting our warning to the guests. It was hard to get some of them up. I believe that many of them didn't wake up until it was too late to escape from the flames."

William F. Regan and Charles Cox, members of the local militia, saved a woman from the third floor. They saw her groping through the hallways and carried her bodily down the stairs. On the way down they stumbled over two other bodies.

The police force did good work in caring for the injured and providing clothing and shelter for the guests who fled from the burned hotel. The reserve force was called out, and all the call firemen in the city responded. Two alarms were sent in.

GIVES $50,000 TO BOWDOIN

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—Colonel Isaac Henry Wing of Bayfield, Wis., will endow the chair of mathematics in Bowdoin College with $50,000 in 5 per cent. gold bonds. Colonel Wing is a native of Augusta, Me., and a graduate of Bowdoin, class of '56. The arrangements for the endowment were practically made at the Bowdoin alumni banquet here, which both Colonel Wing and President Hyde attended.

TWELVE DIE OF COLD IN MEXICO CITY

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 27.—As a result of the intense cold, the police picked up bodies of a dozen men, women and children who died of exposure in the streets during the night before.

The Governor ordered all lamps lighted in the streets for the benefit of homeless people. He also caused wholesale distribution of blankets among poor wretches unable to clothe themselves.

At the battle of San Juan General Wheeler climbed a tree just inside the American lines from which he sought a view of the battle. The Spanish troops at the moment began a general retreat. General Wheeler, wildly excited, began to cheer. "Great Scott!" he cried, "See the Yanks run!"

Arrangements Made for Funeral of "Fighting Joe," Noted Leader in Two Wars.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—Arrangements for the funeral of General "Fighting Joe" Wheeler have been made. The flags on municipal and other buildings are at half mast in honor of the great cavalry leader.

Services will be held to-morrow at 2:30 p. m. in St. Thomas Episcopal Church on Fifth avenue, Manhattan. Rev. Dr. E. M. Stires, assisted by Rev. Dr. Morgan Dix, will officiate. The body will be escorted from No. 173 Columbia Heights, Brooklyn, the home of the General's sister, by a detachment of the regular army from Governor's Island, the Seventy-first and Twenty-third Regiments, National Guard of New York, and representatives of Troop C. The escort will go with the body to the Pennsylvania railroad station.

The body will then be taken to Washington. A military escort will meet the party there, and soldiers from Fort Meyer will be at the grave on Monday, when the interment will take place. It is thought by the family that unless unexpected circumstances arise the General's body will not lie in state in the capital city.

Invitations have been sent to many prominent friends of the late General to act as pallbearers. Among these are J. Pierpont Morgan, Fitch W. Smith, John W. McKesson, Anson Phelps Stokes, Samuel Redding Bertram, Colonel R. T. Wilson, General Fred D. Grant, Colonel John Jacob Astor, Captain William Astor Chanler, Generals O. O. Howard and Jacob Kent, General Harden, General Carlton and Colonel Latham Anderson.

SEARCH FOR BANGOR MAN

BANGOR, Me., Jan. 27.—Abraham Jacobs of No. 93 Fourth street disappeared on the night of October 21, 1905 and from statements made by his children and the neighbors which have reached the ears of the police have caused a strict investigation to be begun.

Jacobs was a truckman and lived with his wife and five children. He and his wife had quarrelled over the question of allowing their daughter Rosa to attend a Baptist Sunday school, the wife being violently opposed. The quarrels continued and finally Mrs. Jacobs sent to New York for her brother. It is said the brother quarrelled with Jacobs.

GARLAND'S SON PLANNED THEFT

CHICAGO, Jan. 27.—William Garland, twenty-four years old, arrested at State and Washington streets on suspicion of planning a robbery, said his was "just a plain hard luck story with no excuses." He told the police he was the son of Augustus H. Garland, former United States Attorney-General. Two detectives searched him and found a piece of stone wrapped in a stocking concealed under his coat. He had been lingering near a large jewelry store for several hours.

"I simply was down and out," he said. "I had hunted for work without success. I read in the papers of the easy way in which hold-up men had smashed jewelry store windows and got away with the goods, and decided that I would turn robber."

ARRESTED GIRL HEART BROKEN

The friends of Miss Fannie E. Thomas of Charlestown, who was arrested because she had cashed two checks given her by her former employer, as she understood, in part payment of a loan, when there was no money in the bank to meet them, are greatly concerned over her condition.

In the Charlestown court she protested her innocence of any wrongdoing and was allowed to go on her own recognizance. But she feels that she cannot live down the disgrace of her arrest and her grief is thought to be preying on her mind.

FORGIVES GIRL WED TO GENTILE

NEWPORT, R. I., Jan. 27.—Eugene Schreier, a prominent Hebrew business man, has forgiven his daughter Edith, aged eighteen, and Joseph Badnely, an Italian musician, with whom she eloped on Wednesday.

Mr. Schreier was prostrated with grief when he learned that his daughter had married a Gentile. His daughter and new son-in-law asked forgiveness and told him that the young man had adopted the Jewish faith. Mr. Schreier then summoned his married children, called in prominent Hebrews, and forgave the runaways. They will live under his roof.

BIG CARP ATE 100,000 TROUT

MONTPELIER, Vt., Jan. 27.—A carp 25 years old, 27 inches long and weighing 23 pounds was shot in the mud at the bottom of a pond on the Langdon estate, which was drained to see why trout would not thrive in its waters.

It was then remembered that a number of carp were placed in the pond twenty-five years ago. Since then many ineffectual attempts have been made to stock the pond with trout, and it is estimated that the big carp must have eaten 100,000 fry and fingerlings.

KEPT AT WORK WITH FRACTURED SKULL

Michael J. Cherwalk is in the dangerous ward at the City Hospital with a compound fracture of the skull and his recovery is doubtful.

Thursday evening he fell from a South Boston car in Adams square. He got up unassisted and resumed his way homeward. Yesterday he complained that he felt a terrible pain in his head. Dr. Denning was summoned, who, after a hasty examination, declared the man was suffering from a fractured skull.

To Quickly Readjust Our Clothing Stock We Offer $10.50 Overcoats and Suits at $7.50

We have gone further than that. We have reduced the prices of all medium and high grade clothing because immediate stock readjustment is necessary. Too many overcoats and too many heavy weight suits. You know the reason—a mild winter.

With the exception of a few days, summer clothes could have been worn till now. The cold days are here, and those who have refrained from buying may do so at a great saving.

Former prices have been abandoned all along the line, as today's quotations show. But our store policy makes it imperative that this big clothing stock shall be disposed of at once, and unusually low prices create the force that will make it move. Here's the way the prices have dropped:

$7.50 for Men's $10.50 Overcoats or Suits
$9.00 for Men's $15.00 Overcoats or Suits
$12.00 for Men's $18.00 Overcoats or Suits
$14.50 for Men's $25.00 Overcoats or Suits

The Suits are made of Tweeds, Scotch Cheviots, Worsteds, Black Thibets and Black Unfinished Worsteds in single and double breasted styles. The coats are cut in the new length, some with deep centre vents and others with side vents. Each garment is hand-finished and tailored throughout in a strictly first-class manner. A perfect fit is assured in each instance.

The Overcoats are made in the very newest and most acceptable styles of Black and Oxford Friezes, smooth Black and Blue Kerseys, Baltic Friezes and Scotch Cheviots. There are single and double-breasted models, the collars are high and snug fitting. You may have coats semi-fitting or with loose backs. These overcoats are admirably made, and, no matter what price you pay, you will secure a bargain.

ALLEGES TRY AT SUICIDE IN DIVORCE SUIT

Woman Charges Cruelty and Declares Husband Made Self-Death Threats.

HELD KNIFE OVER HEAD

Alleging in her libel that her husband had been guilty of extreme cruel and abusive treatment toward her because of his many threats against her and that he had several times intimidated her by apparently attempting to commit suicide, Mrs. Ethel M. Parker sought in the Superior Court before Chief Justice John A. Aiken, a decree of divorce from her husband, Arthur F. Parker. Justice Aiken took the case under advisement.

Mrs. Parker testified that they were married in 1901 in Boston, and that from a few days after their marriage until they separated in June, 1904, her husband was extremely cruel in his accusations against her and caused her much mental anguish by apparently attempting to commit suicide.

Picked Up Carving Knife.

She testified than on one occasion her husband threatened her life, picking up a carving knife and holding it over her head in a threatening position and then driving the blade into a board nearby. She testified that her husband at one time placed a tubing attached to a gas jet in his mouth and that he fell from the chair apparently dead. She said that he attempted, apparently, to take morphine another time, much to her horror.

Dayton A. Merrill, who was prominently mentioned by Mr. Parker in his defence of the libel in connection with Mrs. Parker, corroborated the testimony of Mrs. Parker in regard to the apparent attempts at suicide.

On the stand Mr. Parker admitted that he had attempted to intimidate his wife by apparently committing suicide, but said that he did it after having words with his wife "merely to rectify her mistakes."

Husband Explains.

In regard to the threatening attitude he was alleged to have taken toward her with a knife, he said: "I went home one noon and found her crying. I endeavored to learn why, became angry and had words with her. I then picked up a knife by the handle, held it over my own head as one would a dagger, and then either tried to hit myself with it or else struck the table with the point, I don't remember which."

Mrs. Parker testified in rebuttal that Mr. Parker had accused her of being unfaithful to him and that he had said at that time, with an oath: "I will go get a revolver and shoot the scoundrel who has come between us." She said that he apparently meant Mr. Merrill and so she warned the latter, who left the house two or three days afterward.

Mrs. Parker said she left home because she feared her husband.

HUB PRINTERS WILL MEET TO VOTE ON STRIKE

Indications Are That 200 Book and Job Men Will Go Out For Eight-Hour Day.

A vote to call a strike in every book and job office in this city which does not grant the eight-hour day on February 1 will be passed at the monthly meeting of the Boston Typographical Union to-morrow afternoon at Brodbine hall, corner of Dover and Albany streets. From present indications, about 200 printers will strike for the eight-hour day in thi[illegible]

"The International Typographical Union is safely in the eight-hour column," reads a bulletin received from International President Lynch by the local officers. "From now on there will be a gradual increase in the number of unions in the eight-hour list. With more than 400 unions now in this list, and 88 in the strike list, there remain to be accounted for 164.

"In February several contracts expire, notably in Boston and Baltimore, and our movement will then have reached its maximum. There will be a gradual decrease in the number of unions and members on strike after February, and it is confidently expected that the tide will set strongly toward a complete victory.

"Of the 164 unions still unaccounted for, a number have contracts running for a greater or less period, these contracts having been negotiated prior to the St. Louis convention and action by the referendum. The balance are either negotiating for the eight-hour day or are not in a position to move just now, but as circumstances become more favorable the demand will be made.

"At the present time seventy-five per cent. of our membership enjoy the eight-hour day, and this warrants the assertion that our campaign is a pronounced success, greater than has attended any former trades union demand of similar proportions." A later bulletin received from President Lynch states that 412 cities and towns have been granted the eight-hour day.

Well-Known Amateur Stars to Appear in Production of "The Lion's Mouth."

BROCKTON, Jan. 27.—A gondola, formerly owned and used by Sir Henry Irving, occupied by eleven of Brockton's prettiest society girls, will be one of the striking features of the Algonquin Club opera, "The Lion's Mouth," to be given on [illegible]ary 5, 6 and 7.

The opera, which will be the season's leading social event in Brockton, is the composition of Charles P. Scott, the well-known Boston musician. He will also direct the orchestra at the performance. Stanton Hill is the author of the lines.

Mrs. Clara W. Jackson, who will take the leading soprano part, is a well-known Boston singer, and a mmeber of both the Choral Art and Cecilia societies. The leading contralto is Mrs. S. Rachael Blake, favorably known as a local singer of much promise. Clement B. Nash, leading tenor, is also a prominent local singer. Joseph

YELLED THAT HE WAS TUCKER

Shouting at the top of his voice that he was Charles L. Tucker, and waving his arms excited[illegible] man who when taken to the police station gave his name as Samuel Metcalf, gathered a large crowd on Harrison avenue.

Patrolman McCready came along and took him into custody. At the station he was unable to say where he lived and could give no reason for his thinking he was Tucker. The man was in a highly nervous state and was immediately transferred to the Tombs and placel in a padded cell. He will be examined as to his sanity.

TAKE BOY FOR WEDDING FAKE

WORCESTER, Jan. 27.—Albert Anderson, a pupil in a local business school, has been arrested on the charge of giving a newspaper a false marriage notice. The complainant is David Pobolinski, father of Bessie Pobolinski, the reported bride.

The statement alleged that the daughter of the complainant, with Albert Tattersall, were to sail for Jamaica. The notice also alleges that Mrs. Tattersall was formerly Miss Bessie Pobolinski. Anderson admits giving the notice to the papers, but did it as a joke.

15-YEAR-OLD MILL GIRL DISAPPEARS

To the Scotchmen of America

THERE is an article in MUNSEY'S MAGAZINE of great value to you—an article you can not afford not to read. It is on THE SONS OF SCOTLAND IN AMERICA, and is a romance of Scottish brains and Scottish pluck and Scottish achievement. It shows the constructive genius of the race, and the tireless energy and fighting qualities of the race.

The Scots, like the English and the Irish and the Dutch, were basic in our civilization. Five Scotchmen were among the signers of the Declaration of Independence, and of the four members of George Washington's original cabinet, three were of Scotch blood—Alexander Hamilton, Knox, and Randolph. Eight of our Presidents have been of Scottish or Scotch-Irish blood.

A Great Series of Race Articles

This is the second paper in a series of race articles now appearing each month in MUNSEY'S MAGAZINE. The first was on THE JEWS IN AMERICA. The third will be THE GERMANS IN AMERICA. Then follow THE IRISH, THE ENGLISH, THE FRENCH, THE DUTCH, THE CANADIANS, THE SCANDINAVIANS, THE ITALIANS, and finally THE AMERICANS IN AMERICA.

This is a great series of articles which should be read by every one who is of the blood discussed, and every one of any blood at all who is enough of an American to wish to know who is who and what is what. This article on the Scots in America appears in

Munsey's Magazine
For February

Illustrated with 18 portraits of leading Scots in America

It was the romantic Paul Jones, a Scotchman, who founded our navy. It was a Scotchman who founded Princeton University. It was a Scotchman, James Gordon Bennett, who gave us our modern American journalism. And it was Andrew Carnegie, a Scotchman, who first organized our steel industry upon its present colossal scale, and who, beginning his career as a messenger-boy in Pittsburg, became in a short span of life the greatest ironmaster of the world and the second richest man in the world.

The February MUNSEY is one of the finest and most finished numbers in all that goes to make a high-grade magazine that we have ever issued. In the dignity and quality of its contents, in its press-work, including color printing, and in the excellence of the paper on which it is printed, there is no better magazine of the month at any price—none better anywhere.

On all news stands 10 cents; by the year $1.00.

ARREST BANK ROBBER AFTER FOUR YEARS

Detectives Pick Up by Chance Conspirator in Big Liverpool Swindle.

ONCE KNOWN IN BOSTON

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—After a search of more than four years, extending all over the world, central office detectives by mere chance picked up on the street James Manes, declared to be a former American bookmaker, who is wanted in connection with the famous Bank of Liverpool robbery in November, 1901, when the bank, by forgery and conspiracy, was defrauded out of more than $800,000. Subsequently $350,000 of this amount was recovered from the conspirators.

Manes admits his name but asserts that he is entirely ignorant of the robbery. He will have a hearing in police court to-day, and probably will be held to await word from the English authorities, who have been apprised by cable of the arrest.

The local police say there is no question as to the identity of Manes, who now is fifty-five years old and walks as though a victim of locomotor ataxia. The latter fact aided the police in identifying the prisoner.

The arrest was made by Detectives Cain and Collins of the headquarters staff, who came face to face with Manes in the midst of a rush-hour throng.

The detectives had recently been reading of the Liverpool bank robbery, and had been discussing the escape of Manes, the only person unaccounted for in connection with the affair. They had studied the photograph of the missing criminal in the rogues' gallery.

The conspiracy to rob the Bank of Liverpool turned upon the weakness of a bank clerk, who, while drawing a salary of $750 a year, became a victim of the betting craze and played the races. He forged the name of one of the bank's depositors, until finally more than $800,000 had been turned over to the coterie of racetrack men.

The clerk, never profiting a penny by his crimes, went to the penitentiary for ten years at hard labor, a sentence he is now serving.

The clerk was named Thomas P. Goudie. His associates were Dick Burge, an English pugilist; F. T. Kelly, a man named Stiles, Laurie Marks and James Manes, all bookmakers. Goudie confessed the plot and pleaded guilty.

Burge, Kelly and Stiles were arrested, but Marks and Manes escaped. Burge was convicted, and with Goudie, was given the maximum sentence of ten years. Kelly and Stiles, by pleading guilty to conspiracy to defraud, escaped with sentences of two years.

Marks was last heard from on an English channel steamer. He did not embark, and it is believed that he committed suicide by jumping overboard. Manes was never traced.

Manes is known to the police of Boston. He was received cordially there, and made his way into much of the city's so-called best society. He was interested in all sorts of athletics, and for a time he was admitted to many Beacon Hill homes and to some of the leading clubs.

His friends thought he gambled and wagered only for a pastime and that he had a large income, though he seemed always to win. The amounts he won were large, too. Finally society became suspicious of him.

Dear Papa—When you come home Sunday morning don't forget to bring me the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN. Buster Brown and his dog is in it now, and I don't want to miss it.

Your Loving Son,

POPE TO SEND SECRET ORDERS TO BISHOPS

ROME, Jan. 27.—The Vatican authorities have decided to hold a consistory March 10. The Pope will then pronounce a solemn protestation against separation and secret instructions will be sent to the Bishops in France as to the attitude they are to adopt toward the law. The Pope may take the opportunity to fill the vacancies in the College of Cardinals, and it is expected that among the nominations will be one American prelate.

MEN NEED SCHOOLING IN THE FINE ART OF LAUGHING, SAYS DOROTHY DIX

CORDING to a recent cable dispatch a school is to be started in gay Paree in which to teach people how to laugh. to cover the subject from both thetic and hygienic standpoints.

melodious and rippling laugh is only the music of the gods, it otes digestion, stimulates the cir- ion, and thus tends to prolong and preserve one's youthful ap- ance.

ever there was a noble and philan- pic institution founded, and one was calculated to fill a long felt t, it is this school of laughter. ter a thousand times to teach girls boys how to laugh than to teach m all the ologies and isms of the rned universities.

What science as valuable as the lence of extracting amusement from ven the difficult situations of life?

What philosophy as profound and elpful as that which enables one to lways see the humorous aspect of all f one's struggles, and trials, and dis- intments?

Need It

ation as helpful as that would teach youth to ebuff of fortune with the man or woman ned in the struggle of laugh and try again, is able?

The school of laughter ought to have branches in every civilized community, and a course in it ought to be made compulsory, especially for girls.

There is no other thing on earth that women need so much as to be taught how to laugh, for it is to woman's inability to look at things from any side but the tragic to which she owes most of her woes.

Taking it broad and long, women really have no more sorrows and troubles and tribulations than men.

There are probably as many wives who are all clay while their husbands are all soul, as there are soulful wives and sordid husbands; there are just as many clerks who are aggravating and incompetent as there are cooks and housemaids; just as many tailors who ruin coats as there are dressmakers who spoil gowns.

Learn to Laugh

BUT there are not as many men who go around with mournful faces weeping or everybody's neck who will let them, and telling their tale of woe to every stranger that they can fix with their glittering eye, as there are women.

The reason is that men have been taught to laugh, and women haven't.

When a group of men get together they tell each other funny stories, and thereby cheer each other up and send each other on with a happy thought.

When women foregather they relate their misfortunes to each other, and burden their already overburdened sisters with as many additional melancholy facts as they can lay on them.

This is merely the result of the women-must-weep theory, which is the greatest fallacy ever started.

Women mustn't weep. There is no sense in it. It does no good, and as a general thing they have got nothing to weep about.

They ought to laugh.

They ought to be taught how to laugh, and if they can't acquire the art in any other way they ought to be sent to school to learn it.

See the Funny Side

IF we are determined to see the amusing side of things we can do it, and women would add enormously to their happiness if, when they encounter the ordinary aggravations of existence, they would tack around until they get a more cheerful view.

Most of us have had the experience of finding some situation excruciatingly funny in remembrance that was agonizingly tearful at the time.

Unexpected company came the day that the children were down with the measles, the cook gone, the delicatessen store closed on account of a holiday, and when the dog had stolen the bread, the cat drank up the milk, and the butcher forgot to bring the meat.

At the time we tore our hair and beat upon our breast, and contemplated suicide, but in after years these misadventures that seemed so tragical at the time formed the basis of our best after-dinner stories, and the sad part is that we did not enjoy the things that were really causes of laughter, instead of tears, at the time they were happening.

A Great Mission

THE mission of the school of laughter is to teach us to get such a perspective on the tribulations of every day that we will be able to laugh at them instead of cry over them.

Any agency that can do this will inaugurate a great missionary movement, especially among women.

For if women can be taught to take themselves and everything else less seriously it will inaugurate a millennium of cheerfulness.

Nothing can be surer than this—that when women cease to weep so much they will have less to weep about.

More power to the school that is to teach people how to laugh.

The world is overfull of hard and bitter knowledge, but there is too little laughter in it.

Don't Be Afraid to Open Your Windows; Try the Fresh Air and Cold Water Health Recipe

GIRLS, do you sleep with your windows open?

It is of the greatest importance that you should do so.

If your bed is near the window, try and rig up some sort of a screen to prevent the draught from falling on you, but let nothing prevent you from opening the window the last thing before going to bed.

If the window is shut you will breathe the same poisoned air into your lungs all night long.

In the morning you will feel languid and as though you had no energy nor interest for the day's work.

Your room may be cold, but cold air does not mean fresh air.

To have fresh air you must put your window either up from the bottom or down from the top at least six inches.

Use as much bed clothing as you like, wrap up your head if the cold seems too great for you, but leave the window open.

It will make all the difference in the world in your general health.

If you can't manage a bath in the morning, buy a twenty-five cent sponge, fill the basin with cold or tepid water and sponge yourself from head to feet.

With your lungs full of fresh air and your body freshened by a good rubbing you will be ready to move mountains.

Good health means good looks, you know, girls.

Nothing is more attractive than a wholesome, rosy-cheeked girl.

Pasty, unhealthy complexions come from living in close rooms and lack of fresh water.

If you are employed in an office or factory, try and make it a point to open the windows and thoroughly air the room two or three times a day.

Half a dozen people will quickly exhaust the air even in a large room.

If your employer objects to having the window opened while he is in the room, wait until he goes out, and then open them for a few minutes.

When you find yourself yawning and languid you may be pretty sure that all the pure air in the room is exhausted and that you are breathing just so much poison into your lungs.

Stand straight, hold your shoulders back and give yourself a chance to be a healthy, splendid woman.

Don't be afraid of water. Drink plenty of it and take as many baths as you can.

Learn a few physical culture exercises and practise them night and morning.

This may all sound rather interesting to you, but, believe me, if you follow these few suggestions you will be healthier, happier and better looking.

An erect figure, bright eyes and a good complexion go a long way toward beauty, and, naturally, every girl wants to be pretty.

Try the fresh air and water plan for a while, and see if you won't feel better in every way after it.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

By Beatrice Fairfax

POOR LITTLE MAID

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been keeping company with a young man for the past seven months. He is highly respected and generally pointed out as an example. He proposed marriage to me two months ago. Taking chances that he would ask me the second time if he really loved me, I refused him on the ground, as I told him, that I thought I did not love him enough to be his wife. I did love him, and love him more dearly now than ever. He still calls once in a great while, but makes it his business to tell me how nice a certain lady treats him. He has gone so far as to bring her to my house and introduce her to me. It makes me almost insanely jealous. I am. so unhappy I seem to notice a smile of satisfaction on his face when he notices how unhappy I am to see them together. Oh, dear Miss Fairfax, would it be improper, and do you think he would think any less of me for having him come down and tell him the whole truth?

CONFIDENTIAL.

I AM so very sorry for you, but, dear child, why did not you acknowledge your love in the first place? It may be that he is only trying to arouse your jealousy. At the same time, he may be the kind of man who cannot forgive a rebuff. If it grieves you so much to see them together do not have them at your house. He probably does not really love the girl. If he loved you he could not change so quickly. It may be that everything will turn out all right, but don't fret, dear, for, believe me, the pain will grow less as time goes on.

How Much Love Can You Condense Into Eight Lines?

A Daily Prize for Best Valentine Love Verses

THE Valentine Editor of the BOSTON AMERICAN gives the chance for budding poets to pour forth their effusions. Already the deepest kind of interest has been shown in the contest. Thousands of letters are being received.

The idea is to express all the feeling possible in eight or less lines of poetry relative to St. Valentine. This day, only three weeks away, is dedicated to lovers. Therefore, poems having the "grande passion" as their motif are expected.

For the best of these a daily cash prize of $2 is awarded.

The Valentine Editor has already thousands of these poems. You have as good a chance as anybody to win a prize. Why not?

All that is required is to write on but one side of the paper and address Valentine Editor, BOSTON AMERICAN, 80-82 Summer street, Boston. Verses must not be over eight lines in length.

Here are the love missives of the verses received this morning:

TRY, TRY AGAIN

I'VE sought thee twice,
But all in vain,
To be my queen
And bear my name.
I'll ask again with just a line,
Will you be my Valentine?

Whisper, to my love so fair,
That my heart is just as true
To her—as to the night, are you.

"BILLY'S" OFFER

I FIND at last I want a wife, she must be handy sewing,
And all about a stove, and making, baking, knowing;
To sew a button, make a dress and also mend a stocking,
And, while we both discuss the news, to keep the cradle rocking.
Now, such a woman, "with some cash," will fill the bill all right,
And find a partner who will help in marrying "Billy White."

THIS WOMAN OBJECTS TO DOROTHY DIX'S DIAGNOSIS

EDITOR HOME PAGE:

I've just been reading Dorothy Dix's "Ten Commandments for Wives" and I'm quite willing to own that I'm a good deal indignant at its tone and implications!

Speaking generally, I think it's a good deal of a slur on the average married woman. There may be a few women who hang back and let the husband pull the whole load, and even find fault with his pace while he does it; but in the majority of homes I believe the wife does her full share in carrying the burden of family life.

The earning of the money which furnishes the machinery of the home is no more arduous—and not nearly so nerve-racking—as the care and oversight requisite to its smooth running, and the woman who attends to this successfully in the oft-lauded "quiet of the home" (which is simply another term for hum-drum monotony) is doing quite as much, and as hard work, as the man down town who, with his work, has the stimulus of changing scenes and contact with brisk surroundings.

Why should he specially deserve or expect gratitude from her? Turn it around and look at the other side of the shield!

She was a bright, winsome girl when he marr [illegible] and he congratulated himself on [illegible] luck in winning her. He admire [illegible] taste in dress and was pro [illegible] cess. [illegible] life saw a change.

The wedding finery was passe—so was the wife. The first baby, with all its care and responsibility, had arrived, and the fair young wife grew thin and wan with the unaccustomed care.

Up half the night with a crying child isn't conducive to a cheery morning face, but his breakfast must be looked after and his comfort assured, and so she drags herself downstairs and, with one ear strained to catch the least sound from his child, ready to fly upstairs to hush its lightest cry, she sits at the head of the table, watching over his comfort, interesting herself in his plans, and when he is away to business busying herself with butcher and baker and candlestick maker, looking after the never ending routine of the house and home!

Servants? Yes, but what are they without the oversight of the mistress of the house? As well may you expect the work of his office to go on successfully without his supervision because he has clerks as to think that because there are servants in a house its mistress has "nothing to do."

It is because of her methods and watchfulness that his home is bright and clean and tasteful, that meals are well served, that his money brings full return in comfort and cosiness!

And your maker of those commandments thinks sh [illegible] ought to be "grateful"!

I think the word gratitude has no place between [illegible] usband and wife except as it voices t [illegible] attitude toward the God who has give [illegible] a home and a life together!

THE HIDDEN MARRIAGE

Begin To-day to Read This Great Story of Intrigue

A Romance of Beacon Street and the Slums of Boston

Copyright, 1905, by American-Journal-Examiner

SANGSTER had found no opportunity that day of speaking to the new heir about the intentions his late master had told him of, the wishes he had expressed in his letter to his nephew. Mordaunt was talking with the solicitor. He seemed to avoid the old clerk; had seemed to avoid him during the three days that followed.

Neither—as the old fellow had made it his business to find out—had he communicated with Mrs. "Graham," whose address he had given to Mordaunt.

Sangster knew nothing more of Mrs. "Graham" than the Judge's veiled allusions had told him; he was not curious to find out or even speculate what this lady's claim on Stephen Cathcart had been; what did concern him was that his late master's wishes should be fulfilled in letter and spirit. And he was beginning to feel more than uneasy.

Before leaving he wrote a letter to Mordaunt.

"Dear Sir: As one who was more or less in the confidence of my late dearly-loved master, I would respectfully ask you to be good enough to arrange a meeting with Mrs. Graham, who desires to see you in pursuance of the wishes expressed by your uncle, Stephen Cathcart. I am sure you will know to what I refer. If convenient to you, will you call upon Mrs. Graham on Thursday at 12 o'clock? I will communicate with the lady and inform her of the arrangement I am taking the liberty of making on her behalf.

Your obedient servant,

"BENJAMIN SANGSTER."

An Intruder

Sangster also wrote a note to Mrs. Graham at the room she and her daughter occupied in a rather shabby neighborhood in South Boston. He told her what he had written to Mordaunt, and also said that out of respect of his late employer's wishes he himself would be present at the interview.

He stepped out of the house with the two letters in his hand.

"Mr. Sangster, I believe. Just in time to catch you. Pardon me one moment. You may know me by sight. You have seen me perhaps in Mr. Mordaunt's rooms—in fact, I bumped into you on the stair there the other night—the night Judge Cathcart died. I am Colonel Rory Thorold."

Sangster bowed.

"A terribly sad affair," went on the colonel. "Well, well, we must all come to it some day. And now, Mr. Sangster, I was on my way particularly to see you. I want to ask your help in an important matter. The fact is that a lady whom I have lost sight of for more years than I care to remember called here to see His Honor the night before his death—Mrs. Graham."

(So much the colonel had gathered from the letter that he had found so interesting.)

"Mrs. Graham," said the Colonel, "is an old and dear friend of mine. I had not seen her for years when we caught a glimpse of each other the other night. I saw a familiar face in a cab, stopped it, and we renewed our acquaintance. And—I am so careless—you see, during our hurried snatch of talk she gave me her address, but I lost it. Could you now, Mr. Sangster——"

It was while he was talking to Sangster that the colonel's watchful eyes, peering through his gold-rimmed glasses, had caught the name "Graham" from the envelope that Sangster held in his hand, and saw beyond it the address," South Boston."

"It was somewhere in South Boston—her address," said the colonel.

Sangster had no misgivings that the colonel was not as he represented himself—an old friend of Mrs. Graham. Accordingly he said:

"If you are going to call on her, would you be so good as to hand her this letter."

"Delighted," said Colonel Thorold, taking the letter and departing wearing a broad smile.

The next morning, in his new rooms, old Sangster got this note from Mordaunt:

"Since the lady wishes to see me, I will make it convenient to see her for a few minutes at the place and time you suggest."

CHAPTER XV.

The Wishes of the Dead

SANGSTER, in whose mind a dislike and distrust of Mordaunt was finding somehow a firm place, made it his business to arrive at Mrs. Graham's rooms some time before the hour appointed for the interview with Mordaunt. He had engaged these rooms himself for Mrs. Graham because at their lodgings they could not escape the eyes of the curious when Olive's identity was learned, which it soon was. Old Sangster found mother and daughter showing traces of tears in their eyes.

"Come, come," he said kindly, "what is the trouble?"

Somehow the girl was moved to make a confidant of the old man.

"Miss Agnes Aylmer, whom I was accused of killing," she said, her voice breaking at all the painful recollections the subject brought up, "left me, as you know, $5,000 in her will. But she also made the chief beneficiary, Percival Murston, the executor of the will. Do you remember the evidence at the trial? This man, Murston, pursued me with attentions until I was forced to quarrel with him, and then he went to his mother with a false story on his lips of how I had tried to entrap him into a marriage, and I was discharged. This letter I have in my hand is from Murston's lawyers. It declares that he will contest the part of the will that allows me $5,000. He will charge undue influence on my part. I suppose if I seek to secure my rights the whole world will judge that I am trying to get money that is tainted with blood."

"According to the late Judge Cathcart's wishes," said Sangster, "the newspapers have given the widest publicity to Cartmell's discovery of the physician who declared that he treated Miss Aylmer for the morphia habit while she was abroad with you."

"I have written to his lawyers to-day," said the girl. "I told them that I would not touch a penny of the money. And yet——" the girl paused. She and her mother were very near the end of their resources. With that money, Olive thought, they might leave New York and go to live quietly where they were not known.

Old Sangster had the penetration that sympathy gives.

"Pardon," he said, "I suppose perhaps that your resources may be—may be—but then," he ended smiling, "Mr. Mordaunt will be here, and, as he has been told Judge Cathcart's wishes, I am sure that soon you will have no cause to worry on that score."

JACK HARKAWAY'S SON

Synopsis

JACK HARKAWAY backed his friend, Homer Rivers, inventor of a new airship. In the trial trip it became unmanageable and ran away with them, landing them in Africa. A huge native, with two trained lions, attacked them, but the lions were rendered unconscious by discharging gas from the machine, and Jack overcame the black after a terrible struggle. A crowd of natives were driven off by rockets, but a geyser of hot water threatened to scald Jack and Rivers to death. Jack started out to explore the neighborhood and caught a glimpse of a white man who avoided him. He found a warning written in English on a rock, threatening him with death unless he left the country and signed by "The White King."

CHAPTER XIII.

Just in Time

Copyright, 1906, by American-Journal-Examiner.

LONG before Jack was looking at the grisly sight before him, Rivers was dodging the great python.

As the long head was hurled at him like a bolt out of a catapult he stepped to one side, and with a terrific crash the snake collided with the side of the machine.

The blow broke half a dozen of his vertebrae, and with a final hiss he fell limply into the car, only the slight motion of the end of his tail, showing that he was still alive.

But Rivers was through with snakes for that day.

To stay where he was any longer he felt was to invite another attack from some of the fearful creatures of the jungle.

He therefore supplied himself with food, took a couple of revolvers and a rifle from the rack in the weapon locker and set forth to try to find his friend.

He had not gone far before he was overtaken by the storm and entirely lost his way, but good fortune attended him, and when the rain and dust had passed he found a trail leading through the jungle and full of newly made naked footprints, all heading in the same direction.

Among them was the print of a shoe, and this Rivers guessed to be Jack's.

With new courage he set out on the double quick and soon came upon a deep thicket, through which the trail, led like a tunnel under the trees.

The sound of chattering voices not far ahead filled him with apprehension, but Rivers was not the man to turn coward when there was a chance of aiding a friend, and he kept on running, till at last he came into the clearing where Jack had been deposited by his captors.

Rivers approached cautiously, and so intent were the natives on the horrible feast that they were preparing that they did not observe him as he took up a position behind a rock.

Rivers was some time taking in the situation, but finally it burst on him in all its ghastliness.

The poor wretch of a white man was just being led to the fire, where three natives stood ready with hewn stone knives to kill and dismember him.

This, Rivers saw, was the time to act, and, hastily examining his rifle to see that all twenty shots were ready for use, he brought it to his shoulder and began pumping bullets at the cannibals in a fashion that stretched on the ground as many of them as there were charges in the magazine of the gun.

The attack was so sudden that the natives were completely disorganized, and, letting out wild yells, they broke and ran in all directions, leaving Jack still bound to his tree, while the astonished victim of their awful appetites stood helpless by the fire.

A few minutes later his bonds were cast off and, with Jack and Rivers, he stood looking into the woods whence the cannibals had fled.

Hearst's Boston American Pattern

Ladies' Tucked Surplice Waist

No. 1,238—The picturesque surplice outlines are becoming to every woman, and for that reason are they endeared to the feminine heart. There are so many adaptations of this distinctive style in prevalence, that one is almost bewildered by the assortment, and among the irresistible types is this fanciful model which is shown in a development of forget-me-not flowered silk with reliefs of creamy Bruges lace.

The waist, which may be fitted over the lining, is tucked at the back, and the fronts are richly elaborated with tucks and extre-deux tabs of lace as illustrated, the outline at the neck being in Pompadour effect to reveal the chemisette topped with a high collar. The fronts cross in surplice style, and deep mitaine cuffs give an air of originality to the sleeves, which are trimmed in lace and tabs.

The pattern is cut in five sizes, 32, 34, 36, 38 and 40 inches bust measure. For 36-inch size 3½ yards of material 22 inches wide, ¾ yard of contrasting material, 2 yards of lining and 3½ yards of insertion are required.

To obtain this pattern, postpaid, send 10 cents and the size, name and address to HEARST'S BOSTON AMERICAN PATTERN DEPT., P. O. Box 230, Boston, Mass.

KAUFMAN KNOCKS OUT BARRY

By Boston American Leased Wire.

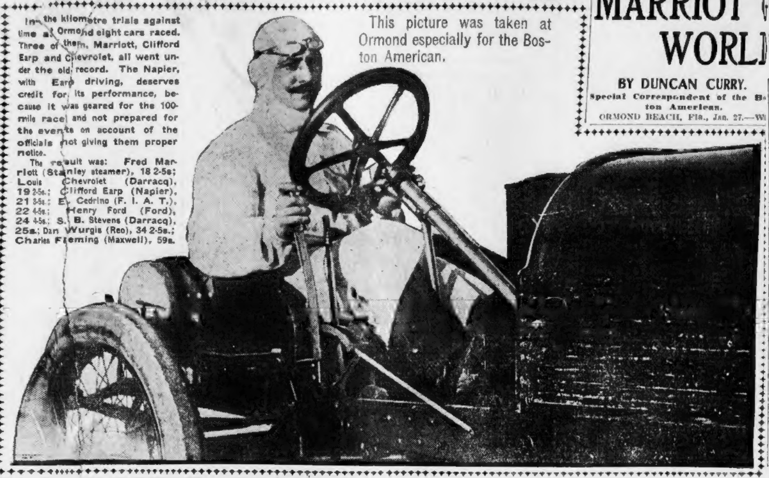
LOS ANGELES, Jan. 27.—Al Kaufman beat Dave Barry in the fourteenth round of a real old time slugging bee. The sponge saved the game Irish lad from needless slaughter, his seconds tossing it in after he had twice taken the count in the last round.

Bill Delaney's new boy has a lot to learn about the fighting game, but after the acute William teaches Kaufman to clean up his work as he goes along he will be ready to talk to the heavyweight champions of the world (Ruhlin, Hart and P. [illegible] please note).

The blow which ended the fight came toward the middle of the fourteenth round. The men swung together in midring, Barry almost helpless and Kaufman leg-weary and puffing hard. The big fellow turned toward his corner and winked at Billy Delaney, then hooked his right hand and landed a ten-inch jolt squarely on the point. Barry was half holding on at the time, but the blow felled him like an ox.

His hands slipped and he hit the floor with a thud, resting on his knees and elbow. Slowly he began to crawl toward his corner, then remembering where he was he stopped and listened to the count. At the word ten he was on his feet, helpless and without defence of any kind. Kaufman dropped another right hook on the chin and Barry went down like a log. This time the sponge came into the ring.

AUTOIST CLIFFORD EARP IN HIS POWERFUL NAPIER CAR



In the kilometre trials against time at Ormond eight cars raced. Three of them, Marriott, Clifford Earp and Chevrolet, all went under the old record. The Napier, with Earp driving, deserves credit for its performance, because it was geared for the 100-mile race and not prepared for the events on account of the officials not giving them proper notice.

The result was: Fred Marriott (Stanley steamer), 18 2-5s; Louis Chevrolet (Darracq), 19 2-5s.; Clifford Earp (Napier), 21 3-5s.; E. Cedrino (F. I. A. T.), 22 4-5s.; Henry Ford (Ford), 24 4-5s.; S. B. Stevens (Darracq), 25s.; Dan Wurgis (Reo), 34 2-5s.; Charles Fleming (Maxwell), 59s.

This picture was taken at Ormond especially for the Boston American.

MARRIOT GOES A MILE IN WORLD'S RECORD TIME, 2

BY DUNCAN CURRY.

Special Correspondent of the Boston American.

ORMOND BEACH, Fla., Jan. 27.—W

the speed of a tornado, F. H. Marriott, in the Stanley steamer car, swept along the edge of the waves yesterday and smashed all records for the mile and kilometre. In the kilometre race (.621 of a mile), the Stanley car covered the six-tenths of a mile in 18 2-5 seconds, or 2 seconds better than any known record, which was the equivalent of a mile in 20 3-5 seconds, or at the astonishing rate of 121 miles an hour.

Fast as this time was, neither Stanley nor Marriott was satisfied that the car had shown its best speed, and an hour later when it came out for the mile record trials, the word was passed to look out for a new record.

Crowd Hadn't Long to Wait.

The crowd had not long to wait, as the cry "Here she comes" had hardly died away before the thin, red, canoe-like shell, with its humming machinery and comet-like tail, with an angry roar which almost drowned out the sound of the surf, came booming on the beach. It seemed scarcely a dozen seconds had passed when the report of the gun on the timers' stand announced its arrival at the finish line. A great cheer went up, as every one seemed to know as if by intuition that a new world's record had been made and that the two-mile-a-minute car was no longer a dream but a reality.

After a few seconds' delay the judges announced that the car had smashed all records by covering a mile in 28⅕ seconds, 127 2-3 miles per hour, or in other words, at the astonishing rate of 188 feet per second.

Stanley and Marriott Cheered.

Stanley and Marriott were cheered repeatedly. Those who know say that Louis Ross, the young amateur Newton inventor, is entitled to quite as much credit for the car as Stanley. The steam racer did not monopolize the record breaking by any means, as the big 200-horsepower Darracq, driven by Louis Chevrolet, clipped a full

JACK O'BRIEN KNOCKED DOWN BY FRED COOLEY

CINCINNATI, Jan. 27.—Fred Cooley, a Chicago heavyweight fighter, whom Philadelphia Jack O'Brien recently engaged for his sparring partner, became so excited and eager in the exhibition here to-day, that he waded in and planted a right swing to the jaw, which sent the conqueror of Bob Fitzsimmons staggering to a heap on the floor of the stage.

Thus Cooley, practically unknown, accomplished in less than three rounds what Fitz, the champion and conqueror of champions, could not succeed in doing in thirteen.

O'Brien and Cooley had two rounds. In the third they met in a lively manner, and Cooley, gritting his teeth and glaring like a man who didn't know what he was doing, closed in and landed the swift right swing that set Jack in a mixed up bundle on the floor.

O'Brien did not get up for some time, and had he been given the count he might have been out. As the result of this blow and fall Jack's back and hip were severely bruised, but he was not otherwise seriously hurt.

In the act of the burlesque in which O'Brien's sparring takes place about six comedians, ridiculously made up to represent pugilistic champions, go through a lot of foolishness. One of them, especially, representing Bob Fitzsimmons, with freckles, toupee and other "props," is very prominent.

"I was looking at that fellow who is made up like Fitz," said O'Brien afterwards, "and didn't see Cooley's right coming. It caught me square on the jaw and down I went. I'll give Cooley credit for scoring the first knockdown, but it is not true that I lost my head. The bump when I went down hurt my back and hip, and for a little while I could not get up."

The gallery at the theatre went wild when O'Brien hit the floor.

MELLODY TO MEET BURKE FEBRUARY 7

Billy Mellody has been matched with Billy Burke, the fast Philadelphian, for the opening show of the new Tuxedo Club, just outside of Philadelphia. The pair will meet for twenty rounds on February 7 and a grand contest should result as both boys are now in fine condition. If Mellody whips Burke he will be matched with Joe Gans at a later date at the same club. Billy Mellody signifies a willingness to take on Jack Dougherty of Milwaukee, who is being touted as a wonder in the welterweight division.

JIMMY BRITT IS PAID BACK IN OWN COIN

MILWAUKEE, Jan. 27.—William Nolan, manager for "Battling" Nelson, lightweight champion pugilist of the world, announces that if James Britt arranges any bouts of more than six rounds previous to the proposed match between Nelson and Britt in April next, that the proposed match will be called off and that hereafter Nelson will refuse to negotiate with Britt.

The only engagement which Nelson intends to fill previous to meeting Britt in April is the bout with Terry McGovern in Philadelphia. Nolan says he is merely following out the terms exacted of Nelson by Britt previous to the latest meeting of the two lightweights in September.

COLLINS, DUFFY AND BURKETT AFTER A CLUB

Jimmy Collins, of the Boston Americans, Jesse Burkett, of the same club, and Hugh Duffy, manager of the Quakers, met at the Copley Square Hotel, for the purpose of conference in regard to the purchase of a ball club. "With Burkett in charge," said Duffy, "and Collins in a position to help out with extra players, the project looks good to the said players." Providence was mentioned as a good club to buy. The trio would not say what they agreed upon, but may give out information later on.

AMATEUR OARSMEN MAY BE PUNISHE

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—Changes in the administrative policy of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen are contemplated. The developments of the past two or three years have convinced the officials of the governing body that the abuses which threaten to creep into the sport must be balked. The attempted violation of amateur rules by a few oarsmen will receive a sudden but decided check, which will act as a warning to others. Amateur rowing has always been held up as one of the few sports that is practically free from the taint of professionalism, but certain so-called amateurs have taken advantage of the apparent apathy of the National Association, with the result that the structural foundations of the sport are seriously threatened, and a lively session is promised at the next meeting of the association, which will be held in this city next March.

Several Important Cases.

Two, and possibly three, important cases will be brought before the National Association, which promise sensational disclosures. From a local standpoint the Mulcahy-Varley case will be the most important. These two oarsmen, captain and lieutenant respectively of the Atalanta Boat Club of New York, took part in the national German regatta at Hamburg last Summer. The race was stopped by the referee, on account of a foul, and the contestants were ordered to row over again. This the American oarsmen refused to do, and were officially ruled out of the event. Captain Mulcahy cabled to the Atalanta Boat Club that the race was won by him and Varley.

Upon their return to this city Mulcahy and Varley received all the honors of international victors, and several receptions and a banquet formed a part of the local oarsmen's tribute to their success. Later developments proved that they not only did not win the race, but they did not start, and their actions in deceiving the rowing public and placing the Atalanta Boat Club and National Association in an unenviable position will result in drastic action by the national body.

The case of the Vesper Boat Club crew which rowed at the last Henley regatta is now under investigation. The allegations are misappropriation of funds and conduct prejudicial to amateur rowing. In connection with this, the amateur standing of several of the members of the crew is bei inquired into. Charges have been ma that money subscribed for legitimate e penses of the crew was paid to certa members of the crew, which is contrary the National Association laws. While th

Octuple Races

So successful was th
sculls crew race at the national that the ruling body has decided to it an annual event. Considering the race was an initial one for any regatta, its result was unusually satisfactory to everybody connected with the affair. There were but two crews in the contest—Greater New York, representing the Harlem Regatta Association, and All Philadelphia, representing the Schuylkill Navy. Next year, unless plans go amiss, Toronto and Boston will enter crews in the event, as representatives of the Canadian and New England Associations, respectively. Every man who competed agreed that his work was much easier than pulling a single shell. This in itself speaks volumes for the speed of the boat, which, as is generally known, is propelled by sixteen sculls instead of eight oars, the more common style of eight-rowing. Official action is expected at the March meeting of the National Association which will make the event an annual feature.

FOOTBALL'S FATE DECIDED TO-DAY

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—Upon the meeting of the National Committee on Football Rules, to be held here to-day, depends the future of the game. What the various subcommittees have accomplished, how much or how little of their labors will be accepted by the general committee, and how far the latter will have progressed before the meeting adjourns, is all a matter of conjecture.

One thing, however, commented on freely last night by those interested was that the committee meets with Harvard flourishing a "big stick" on one side, and the "Big Nine" of the West menacing the members with a "big stick" on the other side. The prevailing opinion was that it might have been better for the interests of the sport had both Harvard and the "Big Nine" refrained from taking out their sticks until the committee's actions had been announced.

A. A. Stagg of the University of Chicago; Dr. Williams of the University of Michigan, and James T. Lees of the University of Nebraska, all members of the National Committee, arrived here last night from Chicago. The trio had previously attended a meeting of coaches and managers of the "Big Nine" football teams. Recommendations for changes in the rules were discussed, and the trio were practically instructed on the Western views in the matter.

Although the Western meeting was a secret one, it was admitted that drastic measures were suggested for the treatment of rough play. It was also understood that the eligibility question was discussed, but as that has nothing whatever to do with the National Rules Committee the Western institution must fight out that point among themselves.

It is unfortunate, say many, that the Football Committee, which is undoubtedly of a thorough national and democratic character, was not permitted to do its work without bludgeons being held over its head. It has been conceded ever since the meeting of representatives from more than seventy institutions in every part of the country in December that if football could not flourish after this, the national game had fallen into such an impossible condition that there could be no excuse for its existence.

CARLISLE MAY GET YOST TO COACH ELEVEN

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 27.—There is a strong probability that Fielding H. Yost, Michigan's famous coach, will take charge of football at the Carlisle Indian School this Fall. This statement is based on the fact that the Carlisle management has been after Yost before, and has already decided not to re-engage George W. Woodruff, the former Pennsylvania coach.

The action of the faculty representatives of the "Big Nine" of the Western colleges in abolishing the professional coach in football will make it impossible for Yost to remain with Michigan, unless the Wolverines withdraw from that organization, which they are not likely to do. The Indians are making preparations for a great team this Fall, and would be glad to secure the former Lafayette player.

KID SULLIVAN HERE TO FIGHT DAVE DESHLER

Kid Sullivan, accompanied by Manager Maurice Herford, will arrive in this city this morning direct from his training quarters in Baltimore. He is in grand condition, and feels confident that he will whip Dave Deshler sure when he faces him at the Douglas Athletic Club, Chelsea, next Monday night. So sure is the Southern boxer that he will score a victory that he has asked the Douglas Club directors to arrange a match for the week following with Jimmy Briggs, whom he fought a draw at Portland two years ago when he was practically a novice.

Sullivan is sure that he can now wipe Briggs off the pugilistic map and is eager to face the Chelsea blacksmith.

JACK O'BRIEN WILL FIGHT IN ENGLAND

CINCINNATI, Jan. 27.—"Philadelphia" Jack O'Brien, conqueror of Bob Fitzsimmons, is going after the heavyweight championship of England, as well as that of the United States.

O'Brien, who is appearing at a local theatre, to-day accepted an offer to meet Jack Palmer in England in June. A few days ago he was offered $8,000 and his expenses to fight Palmer, but he cabled back that he wanted an assurance of $10,000.

Last night O'Brien received another cablegram from Newcastle, Eng., offering 80 per cent. of the gate receipts, which probably will, according to the British fight promoters' dope, amount to something like $15,000. This looks quite satisfactory to the new champion, and he has accepted.

SOUTH BOSTON FORFEITS GAME

East Boston and South Boston High Schools did not meet in the Boston Interscholastic Basketball League series as scheduled at South Boston, because of a decision rendered by the executive committee of the headmasters of the high schools, which declared John A. Mullen and William T. Brown, players of the South Boston High School, ineligible. The action left the team with only four players to meet the Noddle Islanders, resulting in the game being forfeited to the East Boston team.

B. A. A. SCHOOL GAMES MARCH 3

The seventeenth annual indoor track and field championships of the B. A. A. for schools will be held Saturday afternoon, March 3, in Mechanics Hall. The events are all scratch, and are as follows: Forty-yard dash, 300, 600 and 1,000-yard runs, one mile run, forty-five-yard high hurdles, three flights, three feet six inches high; running high jump, putting sixteen-pound shot and pole vault, the bar to start at the height of nine feet.

There will be a number of relay races between school teams.

AUTO TRACK AT OLD SAUGUS

ORMOND, Fla., Jan. 26.—If present plans do not miscarry, a five mile circular auto race course will be constructed at Old Saugus this year, the site will take in the present race track. Joshua R. Harding, a young business man who has several cars entered in the auto meet here, is at the head of the scheme. Harding says that when the project is carried out the Bay State will have the largest auto racing course in the world, and naturally all the big racing meets will be held there.

F. E. Stanley is another Boston man who is an earnest advocate of the new proposition.

WINTHROP, 37; READING, 4.

Winthrop High put it all over the Reading High team at Winthrop by the score of 37 to 4. The visitors scored only one basket from the floor, while the playing of the victors was well balanced, Stockwell and McCarthy playing well, and Turner and Mooney excelling for Reading High.

OFFER CUPS AT INTERCITY MEET

At a meeting of the executive committee of the Gentlemen's Driving Club it was decided to ask for Tuesday and Wednesday of the week following the intercity meeting at Pittsburg, Pa., as dates for the intercity meeting of the amateur driving clubs, to be held at Readville under the auspices of the Gentlemen's Driving Club of Boston some time this Fall.

It was decided also to offer cups for competition at the intercity meeting to the value of $2,000.

VAUGHN'S STAR WORK.

Melrose High School had to extend itself to win from the Winchester High School basketball team at Winchester, in one of the most interesting games of the season by the score of 25 to 16. The work of "Ben" Vaughn of the Melrose team was brilliant. He scored ten baskets from free tries, while King was the star for the home team.

WINNING COLLEGES WILL DIVIDE PROFITS OF GAMES

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—A meeting of the executive and advisory committees of the I. C. A. A. A. A. was held in the Fifth Avenue Hotel, with the following persons present: W. N. Stillman, Yale, president of the association, and H. R. Geyelin of the University of Pennsylvania, J. R. Hoyt, Columbia, and L. Woodland, Cornell, of the executive committee, and Gustavus T. Kirby, Columbia, Thornton Gerrish, Harvard, and J. C. Gilbert, Pennsylvania, of the advisory committee.

It was announced after the meeting that it had been decided to recommend a change in the bylaws regarding the awarding of a dividend to the colleges competing in the annual meeting.

Hitherto a dividend of $10 has been distributed among the colleges competing in the set of games just preceding the awarding of the dividend.

The two committees propose to change this, so that hereafter profits shall be shared by those colleges which have done the best work in the meet, consideration also being taken of the number of miles necessary to be travelled by teams coming to the meeting. There was comment to the effect that this rather puts a professional premium on being well up in points at the meet.

The proposed new bylaw is as follows:

Article VII, to be amended to read as follows: "The executive committee may in its discretion declare a dividend to be divided among the colleges who have been represented by at least ten competitors at the previous field meeting by competition in at least three different events, preliminary or final. Such dividend shall not be greater than the net proceeds to the association from the previous field meeting, and shall be divided among the colleges entitled to receive the same in proportion to the number of men who actually competed and the number of miles from the place of meeting of the college they represented.

The annual convention of the association is to be held on February 24 in the Fifth Avenue Hotel. At that time it will be recommended, according to a notice sent out by Secretary Fitzpatrick of New York University, that Article IX. of the by-laws shall be amended to read as follows: "No college shall enter more than twelve men for any one competition, or start more than five."

It was announced also that, in accordance with Article III. of the constitution, each associate college must send to the secretary of the association before the annual meeting evidence of at least one athletic meeting held under the rules of the I. C. A. A. A. A. in the preceding college year. A programme of the meet is to be considered sufficient proof. A fine of $25 is imposed on colleges that fail to do this.

Notes of the Diamond.

Monte Cross spends his days selling clothing and his evenings bowling "to keep down fat."

Cook, the outfielder secured by the St. Louis Browns from Pueblo, is a University of Illinois graduate, and is well thought of by Manager Jake Stahl.

Pitcher Jerry Donovan, formerly of Tufts College, is to go to the Tri-State. Fred Lake was after him. He pitched for Plattsburg, N. Y., last Summer.

Barney Dreyfuss has secured for the Pirates from South Bend, Elmer Moffit, the record pitcher for the Central League last season, on agreement that if he does not make good he shall cost Pittsburg nothing. Otherwise the bonus is $1,500. Moffit was picked up from the lots two years ago and made a phenomenal record.

* * *

Billy Hamilton, the old Philadelphia and Boston player, would take a bigger lead off first base than any other player, and he couldn't be caught. He had a twist slide getting back that was a peach, and if ever a first baseman blocked him he could look for Hamilton to come at him the next time three feet in the air and with spikes filed and sharpened.

* * *

Hugo Kreiger, a Cleveland boy, who has been playing professional ball for the past four years, has about completed arrangements to play with the Providence team in the Eastern League this year. Kreiger started out with the old Lyonsmen, of which Bill Bradley, Frank Delehanty and several other players were members, who have since joined professional teams. He has played every infield position acceptably with the possible exception of first base, and it is very probable that he will accept the terms offered by the Providence management.

This year's opening in Chicago will come April 20, with the Detroit Tigers, which is six days later than last season, when a snowstorm greeted the fans.

* * *

At Cleveland they are counting on St. Louis as the team to start the ball a-rolling in the Nap stronghold on April 20.

Chicago fans are still complaining because Billy Maloney was permitted to get away. They insist he was not given a fair chance and that he will in time be a second Hamilton. The club management contends that Maloney was a poor judge of fly balls, and made easy catches look difficult because of misjudging the distance.

* * *

The National League will start the ball a-rolling within the reach of Gotham fans first, although it would have been more sportsmanlike if the world's champions had stayed out of the metropolis until April 17, when they are to begin at the Polo Grounds. This arrangement would have allowed Clark Griffith's men the initial whack at public patronage. It is the same old story, so far as the National League is concerned. They must be the "whole works," or nothing at all.

HUB MAGNATE GOES ABROAD

President John I. Taylor of the Boston American league club has sailed for Europe and will be gone six months.

Treasurer McIlreen will have entire charge of the offices of the club and its business while he is away, and Manager Jimmy Collins will be given entire charge of all matters concerning the players, and will have the power to sign and release.

WILL REPRESENT HARVARD.

W. T. Reid, Jr., left Cambridge last night for New York, where he will represent Harvard at a meeting of the American intercollegiate football committee this morning at 10 o'clock at the Murray Hill Hotel.

EXETER PLAYS HARVARD MAY 29

EXETER, N. H., Jan. 27.—Exeter's baseball schedule for the coming season is: April 14, University of Maine at Exeter; April 18, Bates at Exeter; April 21, Bowdoin at Brunswick; April 27, Princeton at Exeter; April 28, Mercersburg Academy at Exeter; May 2, Colby at Exeter; May 4, Yale at Exeter; May 9, Harvard freshmen at Exeter; May 12, Newburyport Athletic Club at Exeter; May 15, Cushing Academy at Exeter; May 19, Brown at Providence; May 23, Springfield Training School at Exeter; May 26, open date; May 29, Harvard at Exeter; June 1, University of Pennsylvania at Exeter; June 9, Andover at Exeter.

KING VS. EMERSON.

Engstrom, the recent winner of the class B amateur billiard championship, showed in good form in the class A New England championship tournament at the Hub Billiard Palace by defeating Emerson by the score of 300 points to 276. The match was an interesting one, in which the victor played a steady game throughout, winning in the final innings by consistent scoring. On Monday evening Dr. King, the dark horse for the championship, will cross cues with Emerson.

GOVERNOR'S RECEPTION A GALA EVENT

Governor Guild and Wife Greet Mayors and Town Officers of State at Somerset.

MANY STRIKING GOWNS

From all the cities and many of the remotest towns of Massachusetts came the Mayors and municipal officers and their wives yesterday afternoon in response to the 1,520 invitations sent out by Governor Guild for the second in the series of three executive receptions which he is holding at the Somerset.

As on the previous afternoon the Governor was assisted by his wife in receiving his guests; a fact which emphasizes pleasantly the social side of functions which would otherwise be monotonously official.

Prominent among the Mayors entering heartily into the social spirit of the occasion were Mayor Allan Bragg of Pittsfield, Mayor E. W. Warren of Newton, Mayor Ross Wood of Haverhill, Mayor Tracy of Taunton and Mayor Griffin of Fall River.

One of the several pleasing and pretty incidents of the reception was when the Governor showed marked favor to one guest, a very little girl, by taking from Mrs. Guild's bouquet several violets and presenting them to her. When her independent little ladyship was escorted away by the now quite ignored usher, she had a very pretty little perk to her skirts and a very triumphant tilt to her head, which proclaimed loudly that she had won the prize indeed, flowers from the Governor's wife, with whom she had fallen in love at first sight, and who, with the Governor, had spent more time in talking to and receiving her than any other guest present.

Aside from the beautiful gowns worn by the women yesterday afternoon, a feature adding life and color to the occasion was the red uniforms worn by the Second Corps of Cadets, who acted as ushers.

Mrs. Guild Wore Black Velvet.

Mrs. Guild, graceful and stately in a princess gown of black velvet, with white lace bodice outlined with appliques of jet and a black velvet hat trimmed with a large white aigrette, carrying a beautiful bouquet of valley lilies and violets, received with the Governor.

Mayor and Mrs. Fitzgerald arrived late and after chatting for some time with the Governor and Mrs. Guild held a little side reception of their own. Mrs. Fitzgerald wore a vastly becoming gown of white renaissance lace over white silk trimmed with appliques of Irish point lace, and a white lace hat laden with white plumes.

Mrs. James A. Frye, wife of Adjutant-General Frye of the staff, was also a late arrival and after being received chairs were brought for her and Mrs. Guild and they sat and visited until others demanded attention from the "first lady." Mrs. Frye wore a mode panne velvet gown and a white hat.

Mrs. Gettamy, wife of the Governor's secretary, was charming in an Alice blue princess gown with white lace bodice.

Mrs. W. F. Humphrey of Brookline wore a most beautiful gown of gray embroidered crepe, trimmed with point duchesse lace and ermine furs. Mrs. H. E. Weatherbee was in mauve crepe de chine with touches of pastelle pink satin.

Mrs. William Barker's gown was of gray silk, with insertion of white point lace. Mrs. A. J. Jackson looked particularly well in a gown of gray pou de cine, with yoke of embroidered chiffon and a hat covered with violets.

Mrs. M. Dwyer wore a mode silk polinette gown with yoke of venice lace. Mrs. Samuel S. Symmes looked most distinguished in black chiffon over black silk, with richly appliqued yoke.

Mrs. H. Rayner of Waltham wore mode silk and dark blue hat. Mrs. Walter Flint of Beverly was in dark blue foularde satin with trimmings of rose point lace. Mrs. I. A. Morton Small's gown was of black satin with boleroes of jet and yoke of embroidered white chiffon.

Mrs. T. F. Quinn, in an imported gown of violet liberty satin and Irish point lace and large black picture hat, was well to the fore among those carrying off the sartorial honors.

Gowns of Many Hues.

Mrs. A. English Brown's gown of black dotted net over black silk with yoke of black was particularly becoming. Her hat was of jet, trimmed with one large black plume.

Mrs. H. M. Forristall of Saugus was gowned in changeable green silk with lace yoke, and her hat was of white lace, trimmed with delicately shaded green plumes.

Mrs. James McKenna wore black silk with touches of white.

Mrs. H. D. Humphrey of Dedham was in mode eolien with yoke of old point lace and touches of pastelle pink velvet.

Mrs. L. A. Newcomb was in black and white silk, as was also Mrs. E. A. Mandeville of Dedham.

Mrs. Charles Thurston of Cambridge, with her husband, was surrounded the greater part of the afternoon. Mrs. Thurston looked dainty in a modish gown of white lace over white silk and large white lace hat trimmed with white plumes.

Miss Nellie A. Fredson was among the young girls present, and looked well in champagne corded silk with yoke of white lace over pink outlined with Renaissance lace.

Mrs. George D. Soule wore a princess gown of black silk and a black picture hat. Mrs. Harry Stanley was in brown silk, with white lace garnishings and wore a black hat laden with plumes.

Mrs. George E. Cornwall of Melrose was extremely chic in violet crepe de chine, with Irish point yoke, and hat of a deeper shade of violet, trimmed with shaded violet plumes.

Mrs. C. C. Sweet was in gray foularde satin, with inserts of heavy white lace.

Mrs. Herbert Brayton looked charming in a simply made gown of voile mode, with touches of pastelle pink velvet and a black picture hat.

Among the prettiest of the younger girls present were Miss Hope Paul, in white net over flowered pink silk, wearing a black picture hat, and Miss Maud Schofield, in white dotted net over white silk.

Mrs. S. W. Holmes wore crushed strawberry crepe de chine and white lace. Mrs. T. J. Brown was in black foularde silk, with inserts of black lace. Mrs. L. H. Herrick of Beverly was gowned in black etemine, with touches of baby blue.

Mrs. T. J. Gavin of Watertown was becomingly gowned in violet lansdowne, with appliques of embroidered violets. Mrs. Fred A. Young was in a princess gown of purple chiffon over silk of the same tone.

Striking Effects Noted.

A strikingly sartorial effect was that in the gown of Mrs. C. R. Day, which was a princess of heliotrope broadcloth. Her hat was of beaver of the same shade, faced with white panne velvet and trimmed with violets.

Mrs. A. H. Linscott was exquisitely gowned in a light plum cloth princess, with white lace bodice over white silk, and wore a white lace hat laden with white plumes.

Mrs. W. Craig wore pearl gray crepe de chine, trimmed with appliques of white point lace.

Mrs. John Dike of Melrose was in black net over black silk, and Mrs. W. T. Bramhall wore a mode silk with old rose lace yoke over blue, and a blue hat trimmed with blue roses.

Mrs. J. W. Attwell's gown was of mulberry broadcloth, accordion plaited, and touches of white applique.

Mrs. W. F. Nichols was in black spangled net over black silk, and wore a black lace hat trimmed with pastelle pink roses and plumes.

Mrs. Arthur Herbert Whitney was most becomingly gowned in an Alice blue princess, with trimmings of real Irish lace, and wore a white lace hat trimmed with white plumes. Mrs. William Robinson was in pastelle pink crepe de chine and black picture hat.

Madeline Sheehan looked particularly smart in a gray silk with girdle of purple panne velvet, and a black hat.

The decorations of the Louis XVI. ball room, at the east end of which the guests were received, consisted of tasteful festoonings of green, while the tables from which light refreshments were served were dainty with touches of smilax and carnations.

Socially the military and naval levee to be held Monday afternoon will surpass the others, and in point of brilliancy and imposing effect will easily take the lead.

To this reception have been bidden the officers of the United States Army and Navy stationed here, officers of the militia, and commanders of various military organizations and their wives.

'MR. DOOLEY' VIEWS HOTEL BAN ON PUGILIST O'BRIEN

Famous Humorist Vividly Sketches Scene at Tavern Where Millionaires and Turfmen Are Welcomed.

Inspired by the recent experience of a gentleman with a dual personality in engaging board and lodging at some of the taverns of New York, "Mr. Dooley" speaks his mind on the subject in the current number of Collier's Weekly.

The gentleman in question was Mr. Hagan of Philadelphia, a rich, but honest, pugilist, who commercially and robustly beats other gentlemen into coma for dollars in the prize ring. Of him and others "Mr. Dooley" says:

"That was a crool thing they done at th' Waldorf-Astorya to me frind Hagan," said Mr. Dooley.

"Afther returnin' to his native city, an' bein' received with more ginooine enthusyasm thin if he was a reformed mayor, he wint up to New York an' made sthraight f'r th' centher iv all that is best an' says so in th' life iv our young raypublic. It was th' avenin' hour, an' th' scene beggarded description an' many iv th' guests. All New York had gathered there her beauty an' her chivalry fr'm Abe Hummel's office an' the Stock Exchange. There was also some beauty an' a dash iv chivalry fr'm Peotone, What Cheer an' Barry's Landing. Th' milliyon incondescent electhric lights shone upon th' innocent little childher iv th' cultivated classes, an' was reflected in their dimon tiaras as they played skip rope with ropes iv pearl through th' corrydors or begged a frozen absinthe fr'm th' head barkeeper. Their childish pratle about th' prob'ble price iv Amalgamated an' th' latest scandal at Newport give an' air iv artless simplicity to th' scene.

Wealth at Evening Repast.

"It was th' dinner time, an' Rayfined Wealth was at it's avenin' repast, or just goin' to it. Four hundred bartinders were shootin' cocktails at a strugglin' mass iv thirsty but incurable millyonaires in front iv th' bar. A thousan' waiters were dashin' through th' scores iv gilded dinin' rooms, swingin' plates iv soup wildly over their heads or pourin' thim into th' hair iv favored guests. Th' head waiter was talkin' society gossip with wan iv th' leaders iv th' four hundherd. A gr-reat captain iv industhree was makin' a punch in a coal scuttle, composed iv akel parts iv champagne an' tobasco sauce. Th' man at th' cigar counter was hammerin' wan iv our mos' prom-nent speculators f'r gettin' him in wrong on copper. A gintleman fr'm Pittsburg was dashin' through th' Palm Room pursued be th' wife iv his bosom. Two iv what Hogan calls th' jewness dory were mixin' it up on th' flure iv th' billyard room. Flocks iv process servers hovered about ready to deliver summonses in divorce proceedin's. A group iv our mos' conservative financeers were locked in their rooms upstairs an' throwin' empty bottles at officers iv th' law with warrants.

No Room for Prizefighter.

"Into this restful home iv elegance th' coorse prizefighter foorced his vulgar way. He was given room between a promoter iv Hackensack meadows an' th' well-known ex-puddler who is goin' to marry Miss Flossie Gumdrop iv th' Hot Stuff Exthravaganza Comp'ny iv his wife don't kick up to much iv a fuss. But it was not f'r long. Th' rumor soon spread that th' hospital roof iv th' raysort iv aristocratic leisure sheltered a prizefighter, an' there was th' divvle to pay. Th' home lover who was makin' th' punch in th' resthrant indignantly demanded his bill an' rayfused to pay it. Angry mathrons gathered their little wans fr'm th' brokers' offices an' th' caffy, put on their pearl an' dimon' dog collars, an' prepared to leave. Th Standard Oil magnates upstairs telephoned down that they wud give up their rooms an march out if they weren't afraid iv bein' arrested.

But th' hotel officials were prompt to act. Th' chief detective, who had been pryin' a cabman off a bank prisidint with deleeryum thremens, brought th' prizefighter to th' desk. 'You must lave here at wanst,' said th' chief clerk through th' megaphone, that all employes iv th' house use f'r convarsation. 'It shall niver be said that this here fam-ly hotel, consicrated to American domestic life, has been polluted,' he says, 'be a prizefighter,' he says. 'Prizefightin' is a lawful occypation,' said the conqueror iv th' gr-reat Fitzsimmons. 'Thin we haven't any place f'r ye,' says th' clerk. 'Get out,' he says. An' poor O'Brien had to lave, an' there was no place f'r him to rest his head that night but th' newspaper offices. But the Waldorf was saved, th' puril was averted, an' before many hours th' shelter iv wealth resumed th' ordhinry quite an' peace iv a Wild West show.

"An' there ye ar-re, Hinnissy. I see in th' pa-apers th' other day a fellow said we'd soon all be livin' in hotels. I think be all iv us he meant th' rich, f'r th' life is too gay f'r th' poor. I wanst lived in a hotel f'r a night. I was bumped out iv a 'bus at th' dure, an' as I got to me feet th' porter threw me gripsack at me, an' it opened up, an' I was some time findin' me collar. I wint to th' desk an' afther I'd got th' attintion iv th' clerk he called a bell-boy about thirty-eight years ol' an' says: 'Take him to room forty thousand an' eight.' He said it in such a way I thought he wud've been more respictful if he'd put on th' black cap.

He Slept—Pretty Near.

"Did I sleep? Almost. Wanst about illiven o'clock I almost passed away. I dhreamt I was havin' a plasther cast iv mesilf taken f'r th' Art Museem whin th' tillyphone bell rang an' th' tillyphone lady's voice asked me if I was Jawn W. Grates. I said not yet, an' she says: 'Ring off, thin, I don't want ye,' she says. Thin I thried to sleep again, but it was no use. At midnight th' childher iv th' hotel begun comin' fr'm th' theaytre, an' had their suppers iv Welsh rabbits an' jelly cake befure goin' to bed.

"At wan o'clock a gintleman who was singin' to himself thried to get into me room be mistake, an' spint th' nex' hour apologizin' to me an' off'rin to fight. At two o'clock a lady an' her husband in th' adjinin' room fell out over somethin,' an' she cried in th' hall. At three o'clock a poker game on th' flure below broke up in a row. At five o'clock they started holeystonin' th' deck over me head. At half-past five the carpet-sweeper got to wurruk. At six the chambermaid begin thryin' the dure, an' did it ivry five minyits afther-ward. Sivin o'clock was th' f'r th' foldin' bed to resume its original form, an' it did it without lettin' me know. I was rescued, an' I wint home an' slept th' sleep iv th' poor, th' just an' th' domestic."

"I've heerd," said Mr. Hennessy, "that this here fellow O'Brien wanst threw a fight."

"I don't believe it," said Mr. Dooley, "if he had he wud've been a welcome guest."

INSURANCE MEN MUST RETURN CONTRIBUTIONS

Thirteen Companies Admit Giving Money to Party Funds in Tennessee.

NASHVILLE, Jan. 26.—State Treasurer Folk, who is insurance commissioner ex-officio, made public replies of insurance companies to a circular letter recently issued by him. The letter asked regarding contributions for political campaign purposes and for influencing legislation.

Folk announced that where replies indicate contributions for the purposes named(he has notified the companies that restitution must be made.

Folk would not affirm or deny the report that companies refusing to make restitution would not be allowed to renew their licenses in Tennessee.

Among the companies admitting having made contributions are: Aetna, Germania, Home, Massachusetts Mutual, Metropolitan, Mutual, Mutual Benefit of Newark, N. J., Northwestern, Pennsylvania Mutual, Provident Savings, Prudential, United States and the Union Central, of which Governor Pattison of Ohio is president.

RECORD SHOWS LONG LIFE FOR YALE ATHLETES

Theory That Years Are Shortened by Contests Discounted by Statistics.

BEST RISKS FOR INSURANCE

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Jan. 27.—Dr. William G. Anderson, director of the Yale Gymnasium, has obtained data to prove that athletes—at least Yale athletes—do not die younger than non-athletic persons. In support of his contention he says.

"Professor Franklin B. Dexter, librarian of Yale, has submitted to me the records of 761 athletes who competed in intercollegiate events and won their "Y" at Yale on the baseball, football and track athletic teams and the crews between 1855 and 1904. Of these 761 athletes 51 have died since graduation. The causes were: Consumption, 12; pneumonia, 4; drowning, 6; heart disease, 2; suicide, 2; war and accident, 3; died from unknown causes or disappeared, 10; from various diseases, 12. Of these 51 men, 18 rowed, 16 played football, 11 were track athletes and 6 played baseball. If four who were drowned while young be eliminated from the crew table the average age is raised to 47.1 years.

"It is a widespread opinion that athletes are liable to heart trouble, but only two Yale men of this sturdy little army have died from this cause. It would seem more significant that of the 51 deaths [illegible] were due to lung affections, the sports engaged in being football, 6; rowing, 4; baseball, 2, and track athletics, 4. It would be unwise to state that athletic training is a predisposing cause of lung trouble, for they may be only coincident.

"The criticism, therefore, that athletes die young is thus refuted. I have been told by a life insurance expert that college athletes, barring the track men, show a better average expectation of life than the non-athletic classmate, and much better than the general average of insured lives."

SLOCUM PASTOR WHO LOST WIFE TO WED AGAIN?

Bereaved in Steamboat Horror Refuses to Affirm or Deny Rumor.

LIFE FILLED WITH SORROW

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—Following a report which has been circulated for several weeks, the Rev. George C. F. Haas, pastor of St. Mark's Lutheran Church, in Sixth street, which lost nearly a thousand members in the burning of the steamboat Slocum, was asked last night of he intended to be married within a short time to a member of his church.

Mr. Haas seemed greatly agitated, and in a broken voice exclaimed:

"I will neither deny nor affirm this report!"

Pacing up and down the floor, he finally turned to the questioner and said:

"You must excuse me. I did not intend to allow my emotions to overcome me. You see, I have had so much with which to contend. I have been in the papers against my will. My life has been filled the last year and a half with great unhappiness."

"It is said that members of your congregation circulated the report, Mr. Haas."

"No, no, not members of my congregation. No, indeed. Some who pretend to be members of my congregation may have done so. I think that I should be permitted to announce my plans when I am ready to announce them. Now, please understand that I do not deny it and I do not affirm it."

It is true that the report has been spreading for some time that the Rev. Mr. Haas would soon marry. It has been talked about among the members of the congregation.

Mr. Haas lost his wife in the Slocum disaster, and was himself severely burned when the steamer was destroyed.

THE LIES OF THE GAS TRUST

The Gas Trust, as usual with trusts, is trying to deceive the people. It is using for this purpose an opinion by Corporation Counsel Babson which seems to have been prepared by some Gas Trust lawyer. That opinion conveys the impression that if the Council and Aldermen pass the municipal ownership proposition the city will be immediately saddled with a debt of $62,000,000. Babson does not say that, in so many words, does not make a clear-cut statement to that effect, but mixes things up so that the unthinking may believe that such is the fact. Immediately the Gas Trust confirms the impression with a flood of paid reading notices, which appear as editorial articles in the newspapers. The editors print the stuff without reading it, make fools of themselves and try to make fools of their readers by repeating WHAT BABSON DID NOT SAY.

The whole purpose of the Corporation Counsel's "OPINION" was apparently to provide ground on which to build this deception. Analyze Babson carefully and this is the result of his opinion:

The companies demand $62,000,000 for their property—

If the Council pass the lighting proposition.

If it is confirmed by the vote of the people.

If the courts decide that $62,000,000 is a fair price, then the city of Boston will have to pay $62,000,000.

That is what Babson says.

Certainly, who denies that?

Nobody.

But Babson adroitly CONVEYS THE IMPRESSION, and is echoed by the newspapers on the Gas Trust's money list THAT THE MERE VOTE OF THE COUNCIL BINDS THE CITY TO buy all the gas and electric lighting plants at the trust's own valuation.

If anyone in Boston doubts this we ask them to read the editorial articles in the Globe, the Herald, the Post, the Transcript and the other newspapers, all which gravely state that Babson says the city will be bound by the vote of the Council.

Babson's opinion is bad enough, but he did not say that.

After creating this impression, the trust in its editorials gravely says that the matter of price must first be settled, and therefore we must find out what the plants are worth.

Delay! Delay!! Delay!!!

That is the sole purpose of the trust just now. They have fooled the editors, now to fool the Council and the people.

They have not fooled some of the Council. At the meeting Thursday Mr. Williams of Ward 10 put the situation exactly when he said:

"The issue is not as to whether we shall purchase these plants now, nor as to what we consider their valuation to be. The issue is to determine whether or not we shall submit this question to the people, for them to determine whether or not they will purchase these plants. I believe in the will of the people. I believe in the good common sense of the voting population. I believe that after we have passed such an order here, saying that we shall submit it to the people, it is for the people to decide. I believe we should settle that question, and then we can work out the details later—because the valuation of this property is certainly a detail."

Mr. McCullough of Ward 13 also exposed the trick. He said:

"The proposition that this body is to decide is, whether or not we desire to give 110,000 voters of the city of Boston a right to say whether or not they want to go into the manufacture of gas and electricity. I do not intend to discuss the merits of this order at this time, except to ask the members to bear in mind the proposition we have before us—that Chapter 34 of the Revised Laws simply provides for this referendum."

Mr. Doherty of Ward 2, who declared that "we to-day are held by the throat by the rottenest gas corporation that there is in this country," asked that the resolution be referred to the committee provided for in the statute—the people.

That is the true solution—the only solution. If it were not, why should the Gas Trust and their hired newspapers be so anxious for delay?

This is the first time the Gas Trust was ever anxious about the fate of Boston.

Is it not more likely that the trust gentlemen are anxious now—extremely anxious about their fraudulent dividends, because there is soon to be an end of the stream of money they make on water-filled stock and air-filled gas?

Why is the trust anxious to prevent a sale at $62,000,000? Why is it using the money of Boston's people to buy deceiving editorials in the newspapers?

This is what the trust fears above all things:

That the Council may decide to give the people an opportunity to buy or build, and

THAT THEREUPON THE COURTS MAY PLACE A FAIR VALUE UPON THE GAS AND ELECTRIC PLANTS.

THE TRUST WILL FIGHT WITH EVERY DOLLAR AND EVERY NEWSPAPER IT CAN COMMAND TO PREVENT THE COURTS INSPECTING AND VALUING ITS PROPERTY, and

The courts cannot do that until the Council decides upon giving the people a referendum.

Therefore the trust must kill the referendum.

It does not care to fight the referendum directly, because it knows the people demand it; therefore, it, as usual, resorts to deception, to lies, and above all to Delay! Delay!! Delay!!!

Little Editorials from the People

A LIFE FOR A LIFE

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

I wish to enter my answer to the inquiry made by "Jane Edwards" in the matter of capital punishment for the crime of murder. I think such inquiries are beyond the intelligence of the average mind, and there is nothing which will weaken a powerful fact so much as dissension—Babylon is the oldest example of the babble of many tongues and many opinions. If the legal faction of the country or the world can decide that capital punishment is the right thing for a crime meriting the severest punishment allowable, then it is not for the masses to enter their noisy clamor over a thing they usually don't understand.

The crimes of the two women in question were the culmination of a life of sin, and one woman especially was an outcast for living the way she did—and the wages of sin are death. The Good Book says "A life for a life" and the legal portion of the world agrees. Let the punishment fit the crime and rid this world of murderers.

The Eternal Will

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1905, by American-Journal-Examiner.

THERE is no thing we cannot overcome.
Say not thy evil instinct is inherited,
Or that some trait inborn makes thy whole life forlorn.
And calls down punishment that is not merited.

Back of thy parents and grandparents lies
The Great Eternal Will. That, too, is thine
Inheritance; strong, beautiful, divine,
Sure lever of success for one who tries.

Pry up thy faults with this great lever, Will.
However deeply bedded in propensity;
However firmly set, I tell thee firmer yet
Is that vast power that comes from Truth's immensity.

Thou art a part of that strange world, I say.
Its forces lie within thee, stronger far
Than all thy mortal sins and frailties are.
Believe thyself divine, and watch and pray.

There is no noble height thou canst not climb.
All triumphs may be thine in Time's futurity.
If, whatsoe'er thy fault, thou dost not faint nor halt,
But lean upon the staff of God's security.

Earth has no claim the soul cannot contest.
Know thyself part of that Eternal Source,
And naught can stand before thy spirit's force.
The soul's divine inheritance is best.

Keep on Worrying if You Want to Be Ugly

By Caroline

TO the woman who is beautiful one of the most absorbing subjects in the world is how to preserve her beauty.

To the woman who is not beautiful the question of how to make herself beautiful is equally absorbing.

The answer to both these questions is easy to read, but the process is so simple that it won't be accepted by the women of America.

It is merely to avoid all worry and to live as much as possible in the open air.

A woman thus is assured of two things, a good complexion and a charming expression, without which no woman is beautiful, and with which even the plainest can be made attractive.

The strenuous life has been preached so much to the men of America, and put into such violent practice by the women, that at times one almost wishes it had never been heard of.

What the women of America need is less strenuousness and more serenity.

There is probably no country in the world where there are as many pretty girls as right here, but too many of them have harassed and discontented expressions.

They attempt so much in so many different ways and then worry because they can't accomplish what they have undertaken.

There is nothing that harasses a woman and gives her an expression of discontent like worry.

It is usually all sorts of futile things that cause worry.

The worried woman is not the one who has trouble, but the one who is looking for trouble.

She meets trouble more than half way.

As a rule, the woman who has real troubles is too busy making the best of things that have happened to worry about things that may happen.

It is pretty generally conceded that the American woman has about the best and easiest time of any woman in the world.

So there is no reason why she shouldn't have the most beautiful expression—and lead the world's congress of beauty.

Take a Good Look at the Zodiac To-night

By Garrett P. Serviss

NOW is the time to see the zodiac in its greatest glory. About 10 o'clock at night, in middle of January, the vernal equinox, or the point where the sun crosses the equator coming northward in the Spring, is poised upon the western horizon, and the Autumn equinox on the point where the sun crosses the equator going south in the Fall of the year, lies upon the horizon in the east, while half way between them, high up in the middle of the heavens, where the Milky Way sweeps close to the zenith, is situated another critical point in the solar walk, the Summer Solstice, the place which the sun occupies in the latter part of June, when it has reached its highest northern declination.

And rising in a vast starry arch, that extends from horizon to horizon, meeting and crossing the Milky Way at its greatest elevation, is that magnificent procession of constellations that constitutes the Winter half of the zodiac.

As "zodiac" is a term not much used by astronomers nowadays, it may not be useless to say that the zodiac is an imaginary circle, or band, about sixteen degrees in width, having the ecliptic, or annual path of the sun, for its central line, completely encircling the heavens, and inclined at an angle of about twenty-three and a half degrees to the plane of the equator.

Twelve constellations of unknown antiquity, representing the play of human fancy seeing strange visions among the stars, occupy the circuit of the zodiac. Those now visible, beginning at the western horizon and ending at the eastern, are, in their order, Pisces, Aries, Taurus, Gemini, Cancer and Leo.

Pisces consists principally of a long, winding row of small stars starting above the place of sunset and running first southeast and then north. Aries is marked by a pair of unequal stars, one of which has a third smaller star near it. Taurus is altogether a splendid phenomenon, containing two most beautiful groups, the Pleiades and the Hyades, including one of the finest of the first magnitude stars, the ruddy Aldebaran, and rendered particularly attractive at the present time by the presence of the huge planet Jupiter.

Gemini is easily recognizable east of Taurus on account of its two bright and nearly equal stars, Castor and Pollux, about five degrees apart.

The Milky Way runs between Gemini and Taurus; the feet of Gemini, "the twins," and the tips of the horns of Taurus, "the bull," dipping deep into its glowing current and nearly meeting in the centre, while below sparkle the great stars of Orion, with the still more brilliant Sirius flashing farther down in the southeast.

After Gemini comes Cancer, an inconspicuous constellation, and yet one easily identified in the absence of moonlight by the softly gleaming mass of minute stars in the middle of it, which is known as "the Manger." Finally Leo appears above the eastern horizon conspicuously marked by the figure of a sickle, with the bright star Regulus at the end of the handle below.

The zodiac not only includes the pathway of the sun in its apparent annual journey round the sky, but it is also the road pursued by the moon and the planets. Every constellation and every star lying in and along the zodiac derives additional interest from its position. They are all mileposts and signboards on the greatest of imaginable highways. They ought to be to every intellectual and educated man and woman as familiar as the pages of a favorite book. They will amply repay all the attention that may be bestowed upon them. They are more beautiful and attractive the more familiar they become. "The universe," says Mr. G. K. Chesterton, in one of his most telling sentences, "is like everything in it—we have to look at it repeatedly and habitually before we see it. It is only when we have seen it for the hundredth time that we see it for the first time."
